Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

MERELY ROTATING

AMONG the reckless men and women of this nervous age are those who take up their pens with much in the manner of spinners who are given to spinning and weaving. They take up their pens to create a flutter and end by playing whist.

They are good-hearted souls but moved mostly by impulse. When the spirit stirs them they are off in a flash, but in a little while they have their work done and they are left with a cigarette or pipe and a pen.

They are not in tune with the higher activities of the serious-minded. Their happiness if they have any at all, depends on a precarious base. They are not serious enough, smile too easily and tell the most fortunate what should be done to get unkind and a higher pedestal.

Yet these would-be instructors have no valid interest in vital things, no goal to which they are pressing their way, no thought beyond themselves. They are merely rotating in their own preformed orbit.

Living in ease on money earned and saved by frugal ancestors, they find their greatest pleasure in feigning wisdom and handing out advice. Their intentions are good from top to bottom. They are neither better nor worse than the common run of mankind, being generally amiable and kind, their counsel is usually disinterested.

Even the man that digs ditches, stows his ears, for in his opinion he is judge and jury unto himself, and such a pleader in his court will not be tolerated.

To do the most good in this world, we should become one of the world by intimate association, speak its language.

Your Last Name

IS IT THOREAU?

THOREAU is said to be equivalent to the more usual name Hull, for Thoreau is the old French form of Hull, of French meaning both. These names, and originally have been taken as nicknames describing physical or mental characteristics, or from some other source.

The name Thoreau is known here as early as 1660, when a Frenchman, who married a Scotch woman, named Thoreau in honor of the town of Thoreau in Scotland.

WORK ON

By DOUGLAS MALLÓCH

WORK ON! Whatever your desire, What peaks above you your intent, Work on, and never dare to tire. Until you know accomplishment. The humble task is yours today; However humble, do it well; To larger things it leads the way— Perhaps tomorrow—who can tell?— Work on!

Work on!—By working learn to do. The mighty task that lies ahead. New duties are awaiting you— Remember, and be comforted. The river, harbor, and the seas. So sail we on to greater things— Yes, new responsibilities. Your toll today tomorrow brings. Work on!

Work on!—The goal will yet be yours. The post of honor, fortune, fame; He who the most you most endure. Who onward ever up toward fame. And dream not then of idleness. For you must labor even then. Your wealth, experience, success. Must use to serve your fellow men— Work on!

Mr. Lyander John Appleton
Mrs. Lyander John Appleton
Master Herman Appleton
Master Chauncey Devere Appleton

It is Mrs. Lyander John Appleton's opinion that a literal interpretation of that old command, "Put your best foot forward," means to bring all of her and Daisey Mayne's method, tucked and lace-trimmed underwear in the front yard on washday, and the patched and tattered arms and legs belonging to her husband and son in the rear.

Unless something happens to remove Chauncey Devere Appleton from the atmosphere in which he is living, he will grow up as suspicious of what the women call love as a rat is of cheese.

The greatest sorrow of Daisey Mayne's life is that she is misunderstood by her own family. Many an evening she finds herself so lonesome when with them, that she walks out to the gate alone and looks up at the stars, and when she can't get out, she will stand at a window and look wistfully into the dark. Daisey Mayne frequently looks wistfully into the dark, having learned from the books that this is a symptom of Soulfulness. So one night she soaked her pillow with tears in her yearning for the unattainable, and her father, who saw the wet pillow next morning, made her take a dose of medicine for night sweats.

The young lady across the way says the statistics show that married men live longer than bachelors, and this is one more argument in favor of leading a double life.

Cleaning Up the Mess
Helen, during the absence of his wife, was giving a wog party. Bottles, dishes and cigar butts were scattered about in profusion. At the height of the merriness Brown was called to the door, and came back with a telegram in his hand.

"Boys," he cried in consternation, "it's from my wife. She'll be home in an hour. What'll we do?" There was a moment of stammered silence and then Smith jumped up.

"I have it," he shouted. "Let's burn the house down!"—American Legion Weekly.

Not a Kick!
"I just stopped in to tell you," began the man at the complaint desk of the gas company. "That my gas stove blew up yesterday."

"Tell your troubles to a plumber," growled the surly clerk. "That's no fault of ours—you got no kick here."

"Yes, I'm not kicking," replied the customer cheerfully, as he opened the door. "Only I thought I'd tell you that your blasted old slot meter backfired at the same time, and I haven't been doing anything but pick up silver quarters all over the cellar ever since. Good day!"—American Legion Weekly.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

COLORADO'S TYPE OF SOLDIER BOYS

John Charles Vivian, attorney of Golden, Colo., now commander of the Colorado department of the American Legion, got tired of governmental red tape during the war. He decided to do a little unraveling himself. He had been under consideration for a commission as major in the judge advocate's department. But the matter hung fire. The commission did not come.

No one day he enlisted as a private in the marines. On the same day that he closed up his law books, his younger brother, Chauncey H. Vivian, then editor of the Boulder (Colo.) News-Herald, dropped the editorial shears, jabbed the brush into the paste-pot and enlisted also—as a private in the marines.

The brothers served together, the younger brother as a private in the squad of which the older was corporal.
