MAY CARVE LINCOLN'S FACE ON DIXIE MOUNT

Memorial Being Planned for Cumberland Gap.

Harrogate, Tenn.—Picturesque Cumberland gap, Tennessee-Virginia-Kentucky, is to loom in the limelight at an early date if plans mature which are now under way. It has not been many months since the country was attracted by plans to carve the figures of Gen. Robert E. Lee and his staff on the mountain of stone near Atlanta. This time it is planned to carve the full figure of Abraham Lincoln on the mighty limestone peaks towering above Cumberland gap and surrounding valleys. than a hundred feet high and will be carved out of the huge walls which overhang the Dixie highway, jutting out over forest, town and valleys. A nationally known sculptor visited Cumberland gap recently and was charmed with the prospect of carving a masterpiece which would attract Lincoln lovers far and wide. He is making plans and specifications for this work of art and believes that it can be done within two years' time.

To Clear Away Timber. When the figure is carved and stands out in bold relief the timber will be cleared from the Dixie highway leading up to the feet of the mounmental and gigantic figure and the slopes sown in grass. Then limestone steps will be built leading up the slope, making a sort of shrine where men and women and children may come and view the work of art and the scenic grandeur of the cascades and forests below.

The inspiration came from the Lincoln Memorial university. Indeed, the very precipice on which the figure will be carved is on the grounds of the Lincoln Memorial university and may and let the workmen down on scaffolding a hundred feet or more. All materials, tools and supplies will have to be carried up back of the mountain and let down over Pinnacle peak, hundreds of feet above even the cliffs themselves. Pinnacle peak towers more than a thousand feet above the base of the craggy slopes where the form of Lincoln will appear in stone. Due to the ruggedness of the slopes and the steepness of the mountainside, it will be necessary for tools and supplies to be carried to the top by man power, as cars cannot negotiate the

Notwithstanding the fact that Cumberland Gap can number not more than a thousand souls, the place has a halo of glory about it and has contributed its part in the making of national history. Even before the intrepid pioneer, Daniel Boone, piloted the ancestry of the great Lincoln through the gap into the bluegrass region of Kentucky, Doctor Walker stood on Pinnacle peak and named the region the Cumberlands, after the duke of Cumberland, and the gap he named the Cumberland gap.

The face of the mountain precipice art. It is as if a mighty hand had cut the mountain in two, like a loaf of bread, leaving limestone ledges jutting out 2,000 feet, on top of which is Pinnacle peak, from which one may see mountain ranges as far away as Chattanooga and North Carolina, and it is on this mountainside that the figure of the emancipator will be carved, overshadowing the campus of the Lincoln Memorial university as a "malice toward none and charity for

When the clouds of civil war hung like a dismal thunder-cloud over the nation Cumberland gap was one of the tended for that ground because it was the gateway through the mountains between the North and the South. Many of the old trenches remain to this day, and the figure of Lincoln will everlook some of the "bloody ground" made famous by Civil war struggles, and, indeed, will look down upon "Hell's Half Acre," famous in history and story as a place of conflict in the war and also because it has heard the
