SHOW INTEREST IN GOOD POTATO SEED IN THE STATE

More interest in the production of certified seed is being shown by potato growers this year than ever before, according to the Bureau of Plant Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

While the growers have until June to enroll, more than 75 acres have already been entered and three new counties have made inquiry regarding the possibilities of getting work done.

In the five counties, Bradford, Cambria, Erie, Somerset and Sullivan, in which the work was done last year, growers are entering larger acreages than a year ago and additional growers are becoming interested.

While most of the certified seed produced in 1927 was certified and sold during the fall and winter more than 7000 bushels were shipped from the five counties under the tag and seal of the Department of Agriculture this spring. In all almost 30,000 bushels were certified last year for 39 different growers. One grower produced over 2,500 bushels.

The standards for production have been made somewhat more rigid this year. One important change is that fields intended for the production of certified seed must be isolated from other potato fields in order to reduce the spread of degenerative diseases by insects.

Mrs. Emma Kimball, aged 61 years formerly a resident of Ebensburg, died at the county home on Monday. Death was caused by pneumonia and erysipelas.

CONTRIBUTING TO A TOWN'S GROWTH

The courageous merchant or manufacturer who builds up a big business in any community contributes to that community more than he ever personally takes out. The bigger the business or the industrial units, the bigger the town or city, and citizens should never fail to show appreciation for increased values all down the line.

Back of all business activities is the service rendered by banks and financial institutions. This bank has always taken a keen delight in contributing in its small way to the upbuilding of Patton. It stands ready and willing at all times to lend its facilities to any worthy enterprise which ultimately is for a bigger Patton.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION SPLENDID MOVE IN FORWARD DIRECTION, SAYS PRES. KINNARD

Chief Executive of Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania Endorses Co-operative Effort in State for Safer Highways

A Telephone team competing in a recent first aid contest

"The designation of last April as Safety Month by Governor Fisher, and the support of this undertaking by so large a number of municipalities throughout the state, was a splendid move in a forward direction, and one of great interest to all employers," said Leonard H. Kinnard, President of The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, in an interview on safety activities throughout the state.

"It has the particular merit of being more than a mere proclamation. It brought into play many civil factors for the promotion of safety, and was encouraging to those industrial forces that are doing such good work in the shops and along the highways, sometimes unknown to the general public. 'Safety, to be fully accomplished,' he said, 'must be supported by more than preachments.' If the brakes, lights or horn of a motor car are out of whack, the good will of the driver is no great comfort to other automobilists or to pedestrians. If a workman hasn't safe machines and tools and methods to work with, the Safety First sign on the wall cuts a sorry figure."

Employers have long since come to realize that first of all the plant and machinery must be as sound and secure as human planning and inspection can devise, he said. Next, the workmen must be shown what is the safest manner of tackling every element of the job. It's then time to ask them to turn to concentrate on Safety.

Although in the telephone business the work presents but comparatively few hazards, yet the entry into unfamiliar buildings and the work above and along the public highways will sometimes bring a man to grief if he doesn't know what he's about and keep his head up and eyes open while on the job. Safety, therefore, has to be "taught" as well as taught; it has to be everlastingly kept before the minds of the men.

"Each of the thirty districts of the Bell Telephone Company has its Safety Instructor—a man experienced in telephone work who can talk the subject from the angle of one who, by experience, has learned that the safe way is the easiest way, and the quickest way in the long pull," Mr. Kinnard said. "That's sometimes hard to get across to the youngsters who are just breaking in."

It is the job of the Safety Instructor to spot everything, material or personal, that's apt to cause an accident—and then to see that it is corrected quickly. He is the man who heads up the First Aid Instruction. That is a big feature of the telephone work, for when an accident does happen, the men know how to cope with it, at least until the doctor gets there.

Each year First Aid instruction is given to telephone men, and every year for the past ten or twelve it has been more advanced and more intensive. It so happens that each April this instruction comes to a head, in the form of competitions in First Aid by teams of the men. This year ninety-nine per cent of the Bell workmen in Pennsylvania received first aid instruction during the winter season. There were 713 teams of five men each, selected from the total force in the state, to compete for the various district prizes awarded for greatest proficiency in First Aid methods as prescribed by the American Red Cross.

Sickness prevention is also a part of the instruction; and among the women clerical and operating forces this same instruction has during the past five years been constantly on the increase; considerably over six thousand young women having completed in that period health courses approved by the Red Cross and conducted by teachers trained in the work.

"Accident prevention is now a fixed necessity of our high-gear commercial and industrial life," Mr. Kinnard pointed out. "Once it is effectively organized, it has its very great appeal to all who share its benefits. First Aid instruction, its natural corollary, plays a somewhat lesser part but a tremendously important one notwithstanding. It, too, has its great appeal to manual workers. It gives them a sense of sufficiency to meet the emergency when bad luck overtakes a fellow workman on the job. It enables them to lend a skilled hand when some accident to the public finds them in a position to meet the emergency until a doctor arrives or a hospital can be reached.

"Hundreds of times every year telephone men trained in this work are lending such a hand. Sometimes a life is saved. Often the gravity of the consequences of accident is lessened. Almost always there is alleviation of suffering. Altogether, the safety work to which Governor Fisher has put his hand," he said referring to the proclamation making April Safety Month, "is something which is inspiring to industry and to the general public."
