

PICTORIAL LIFE OF HERBERT HOOVER

No. 2

By Satterfield

1. Herbert Hoover's father, setting in Iowa, wrested a hard-earned living from the soil as a pioneer farmer.

2. His natural bent for machinery asserted itself, and he opened a blacksmith shop, and sold farm machinery.

3. Grandfather Minthorn, on his mother's side, was a bookish farmer, who used to read as he rode horseback.

4. Hoover's mother was a great reader and a serious-minded critic of such literature as reached the farm.

CANKERWORMS ARE REAL ENEMIES OF THE TREES

Cankerworms, variously known as "measuring worms," "span worms" or "loopers," are among the commonest tree insect pests reported to foresters of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters. The damage usually reported is done by two species, commonly known as the spring cankerworm and the fall canker worm. They attack fruit, shade and forest trees and occasionally become so numerous as to defoliate forest trees on large areas.

Damage to the foliage of trees by the fall cankerworm since it occurs after the growth of the season has been completed, is not usually so serious, officials of the Department said. Healthy trees attacked by either spring or fall cankerworms will replace their foliage. Repeated defoliation, however, especially upon oaks, leads to attack and injury of the weakened trees by bark and wood boring insects.

Cankerworms are the caterpillar stage of moths, and come from eggs laid by the female moths, which are wingless. The worms are smooth and about an inch long. The spring species is light mottled yellowish brown to black in color, and the fall cankerworm has a lemon yellow stripe on each side with three narrow white stripes along the back. The fall cankerworm is the species usually injurious to shade trees and the spring cankerworm is chiefly a pest of fruit trees.

The eggs of the fall cankerworm moth are fifty to a hundred in number and arranged like little flower pots neatly placed together in irregular bands that encircle the twigs near the end of the branches. Those of the spring cankerworm are egg shaped and laid in irregular batches beneath the bark scales.

Control of the cankerworm in the forest would not only be an excessive expense and impracticable, but is usually unnecessary. Natural enemies ordinarily afford adequate control in the forest. At least forty-two species of native birds feed upon cankerworms.

Upon shade and fruit trees the cankerworm may be controlled by banding and spraying. The wingless females must crawl up the trees to deposit the eggs, and infection may be prevented by banding the tree trunks with sticky substances that prevent access to the limbs, branches and foliage. Some of the adult moths ascend the trees in fall, others in spring, but since they may migrate between seasons, the bands to be effective, should be applied late in September and maintained until the end of May.
