CAMBRIA COUNTY SPORTSMEN HAVE FINE EXHIBIT AT FAIR THIS WEEK AT EBENSBERG

Far Surpasses in Interest and Educational Value Previous Exhibitions. Pattonites Have Display.

The exhibit at the Cambria County Fair, occupying an entire building, and put on by the Cambria County Sportsmen's Association, working in co-operation with the Pennsylvania State Game Commission, and local affiliated sportsmen, far surpasses in interest and educational value any other excellent exhibitions by the sportsmen in previous years.

At the entrance of the Sportsmen's building there is a log cabin of the type used in hunting camps. The cabin is constructed solidly and is a reproduction of one used by a Cambria Co. sportsmen's club. In addition to indicating a natural setting of a hunting camp, it provides headquarters for the men in charge of the exhibit.

At this camp there is a Penton cork trap in miniature with a marsh hawk imprisoned in it. It is said that from five to six hundred crows can be caught in such a trap with one bait.

At the other end of the exhibit there are several Chinese Golden pheasants which are attracting considerable attention. One of the best exhibits, however, near the cabin, is that of the Carrollton Rod and Gun Club exhibiting a large blue crane, a waterfowl, is an exhibit of one-inch trout by the Ebensburg Sportsmen's Association.

Perhaps the greatest single attraction in the Sportsmen's building aside from the many animals native to Pennsylvania, is the exhibit of a raven to Ebensburg with considerable difficulty from the Jos-Wyn Game Preserve of ex-senator J. O. Clark of Glen Campbell. This buffalo is at the other entrance to the Sportsmen's building enclosed in a wooden cage with a chicken wire top. An inclined board walk leads up to a walk where thousands have looked down on this nearly extinct animal of pioneer days in America. Efforts to bring the buffalo to the Cambria County Fair were begun on Tuesday of last week and ended Sunday night when the buffalo was placed in the cage. Seven men sent out to capture the animal on the preserve were unsuccessful for several days and then had great difficulty in caging it to transport it to Ebensburg.

The state game commission has brought an unusually large exhibit of wild animals. Included in this exhibit are a white tailed deer, two black bear, gray and black squirrels, barn owls, a wild cat, a raccoon, porcupine, and two dark Buffalo wolves and one light Arctic wolf, these last three animals attracting great attention.

There is a great one horned owl and near it is a mounted goshawk. As a part of its educational exhibit the state game commission is displaying this bird with the warning that it must be regarded as Pennsylvania's greatest game killer, and should be killed wherever possible. A description of the bird is given and hunters are warned not to confuse it with several species of hawks which are not harmful. A mounted specimen is shown because it is impossible to keep one of the birds in captivity. It will beat itself to death.

A number of ancient and rare pieces of firearms are to be found among the displays in the building. Probably the one attracting the most attention is a gun owned and exhibited by Arch Hooper, of Grampian, a weapon that had attracted the attention of Henry Ford in his hunt for antiques. Mr. Ford has made an offer to buy the gun.

The gun is 70-caliber, hand bored, of the flint lock type. It has been handed down to Mr. Hooper through five generations and has seen service in the Revolutionary War. It may still be used and was used recently by Mr. Hooper in the hunting of squirrels. It was made in Germany in 1700 and during the Revolution was changed to a hammer and cap lock. It is 12 inches long and is a smooth bore, having been re-bored in recent years. Three pieces of German silver are to be seen on the gun in the form of half moons. The gun weighs eight pounds.

In addition to the other activities the Cambria County Sportsmen this year begins the sponsoring of activities of members of the Boy Scouts of the county at the fair. A log cabin similar to the one in the Sportsmen's building is being built for the Boy Scouts near the entrance and has been dedicated to the nas that permanent headquarters.

The display of skins and mounts in the building is exceptionally fine and the Patton Sportsmen's Association has an attractive display.

MANY WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN THE STATE EMPLOYED, ACCORDING TO REPORTING. Only A Very Few People Have Any Idea of All That Work for Gain in the Keystone State.

Women and children are important factors in the Pennsylvania employment situation. This fact is shown in a review of three years' activities of the bureau of women and children, department of labor and industry, just completed by Charlotte E. Carr the director.

Nearly three quarters of a million Pennsylvania women are engaged in gainful occupations.

One quarter of a million children under eighteen years are industrially employed.

Every sixth child 14 and 15 years of age leaves full time school to become a wage earner.

The activities of the bureau during its three years of existence included administrative research and educational work. In 1925 regulations were put into effect for the maintenance of industrial standards on factory work performed in the homes and placed on the employer the responsibility for the observance of the women's and child's labor law. In June, 1928, there were 12,000 home workers and credit is given the employer for the successful performance of the act.

"While the bureau efforts have not solved the home work problems, they have at least clarified it," the report says. It is now known what industries and occupations, what employers and what localities have the most acute child labor problems.

Attention is called to a survey made by the bureau in co-operation with the department of public instruction which reveals the employment of some 25,000 14 and 15 year old children enrolled in Pennsylvania continuation schools. Accidents to minors under eighteen years also received the attention of the bureau.

There is also touched upon in the review the relatively large number of miners employed in the glass factories of the state, and the outstanding problems which the employment of minors in the industry involves, together with a description of the most effective methods which employers have developed to solve or to minimize these problems.

Attention is paid to what is known as migratory child laborers to meet the seasonal requirements of agricultural work and of the canning of fruits and vegetables. As the result of study and with the co-operation of canners of the state, a new labor camp sanitation code was drawn by the Department of Labor and Industry and effectively enforced.

A serious loss of school work among children was developed in Philadelphia through a study of conditions in which school authorities of that city co-operated. These minors, it developed, left school to carry on work, mainly in the state of New Jersey. About 80 per cent of these children lost a month or more of the year's schooling while nearly one-fifth lost three months or more. Two-thirds, it was shown, were below the Normal School Grade for their age.

Various conferences have been held by the bureau during the three years of its existence with a view to solving the various industrial problems and establishing higher standards throughout the state.
