FINE ARRANGEMENT FOR PASS CLOSET

How a Compact, Oblong Kitchen May Be Arranged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a floor plan, sketched by the bureau of home economics, showing how a compact oblong kitchen may be arranged to best advantage, with gists of the United States Department short distances to travel in doing the of Agriculture, this common and of work, and logical routes from one fensive house pest will prey on that work center to another. The floor space in this kitchen is small, doing away with unnecessary walking about, and the paths of travel from the back ing the bedbug. There are other more door and hall do not cross the work centers.

The key point of the arrangement is the pass closet in the connecting wall between the dining room and kitchen. This is arranged as shown in the elevation. The shelves in the upper part are reached from either room, and those below might have been.

they are put away in the cupboard to be taken out on the dining room

This convenient two-way arrangement may be a "pass cabinet" made by a skilled carpenter or joiner, so that on the dining room side it takes the place of a sideboard and on the kitchen side of a dish cupboard. A less expensive plan that serves the same purpose is to have an ordinary closet with shelves built into the connecting wall with a full length door in each room. These doors may be cut across at a suitable point to give access to only the upper or the lower part of the closet as necessary.

COCKROACH CAN BE CONTROLLED

One Good Method Is Elimination of All Odors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It may surprise many people to learn that the corckroach has one redeeming trait. According to entomoloother disgusting insect, the bedbug.

It is not recommended, however, approved methods for exterminating that insect.

The nuisance of roaches in offices stances, according to Farmers' Bulle-tin 658-F, "Cockroaches." If care is taken to keep food from living rooms The opening below the dish closet has sliding panels to permit serving from odors of food are permitted to remain, the roach nuisance can be restricted largely to places where it is necessary for food to be kept. In such places the storage of food material in insect-proof containers or in ice boxes, together with thorough-going cleanliness, will go a long way toward preventing serious annoyance.

Roaches may be controlled by the use of poisons and repellents, fumigants and traps. One of the most effective and simple means of ridding dered gypsum or flour. bureau of home economics. The flavor is given by the cooked peel of two oranges. The bread is leavened with baking powder and should be used while fresh. Cut with a large sharp knife.

Peel from 2 oranges
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
1 egg
1 tablespoon butter

3 cups flour 14 cups milk 4 teaspoons baking powder ½ teaspoon salt

Cut into shreds the peel from two thick-skinned oranges. Cover the peel with water and cook for about 20 minutes, or until tender, then drain. Make a sirup of the sugar and water. Add the peel and cook until about 1 tablespoonful of the sirup is left. Sift together the dry ingredients, cut in the fat, and add the well-beaten egg and the milk. Beat this mixture for about three minutes. Stir in the orange peel and mix thoroughly. Pour in a ed bread pan and bake for on hour in a moderate oven (about 325 degrees Fahrenheit).

Warm Weather Meals

Warm wather meals are made more appetizing by serving some cold dishes at each meal, by using crisp, fresh uncooked vegetables and plenty of fresh fruits, by using little fat in cooking, and by providing cool drinks made from fruit drinks and tea infusions. To prevent digestive disturbances, avoid taking large quantities of cold drinks or iced desserts while working or when overtired or overheated. In heavy meal, and a heavy dessert a hot weather it is well to choose foods sauces and heavy desserts.

cousin, Jerry Hodges.

When she passed Jen's house they were stringing Japanese lanterns across the lawn. Rob was fairly tingling with anticipation when she found that something was wrong with one of the tires. His voice, she noted, was full and low—like Doctor Dan's. His eyes were tired, though Rob saw that they brightened when he looked at her. She was glad she had worn the blue linen. The sun was merciless, but she looked as cool as a blue stretch of April sky. She stood watching him as he attacked the wheel. His shoulders were broad, his neck tanned to a red

"When is your train due?" he asked. "At 2:30. There's only one each way a day, and they're usually late." He looked at his watch. "You've got time, even if it isn't. One hates to miss a train, though. Nothing makes me madder."

'Unless it is to have to meet one when you don't want to!" said Rob vehemently. "When you have to leave the dress you are making over to wear to the one party, perhaps, of your life -to go and meet your stepmother's

The man worked in silence for a minute; then he looked up at her. Rob noticed then that he was young. "Why the 'perhaps—the one party, perhaps, of your life?"

Rob flushed. She had not known men were so perceptive. She felt that he almost read her dreams about Jerry Hodges. (She and Jen had talked from the depths of their girlish hearts. "Jerry is crazy over your type, Rob!" Jen had said. Wasn't that seed enough to grow dreams from?"

"This uncle," Rob evaded, "is dropping out of the sky. Fanny, my step-mother, never saw him before. It isn't even like having a rich relative come -you could afford to break your neck then! But this Jimmie Ladd is poor-Fanny says the Ladds were always camping on the poorhouse grounds awaiting their turn to go in!"

He chuckled at her joke. "But you didn't tell me about the party—that's what I'm interested in!" "It's just a party one of my neighbors is giving. They have a beautiful place, and Jen always gives the darlingest parties!" "But that 'perhaps'-what kind of a fellow is he?

Rob giggled. "If you've got to know, he is Jen's cousin who's coming from Fort Slater today!" The young man took the extra off the rack, placing the old one on in its stead. His face was hot and the perspiration dripped from his brows. "Oh, I hate for you to do this!" cried Rob. "Can't I help?" "You are helping. Nothing warms a man's heart-or cools it-like the lit-

Nearing Jen's she saw that a long car, glistening in the summer sunvellow as a canary-stood at the gate. Jen, on the lawn, with a tall, slim stranger, signaled frantically for Rob to stop. But, like a startled bird, Rob shot by. At home Fanny met her. "I'm not going to the party tonight,

"S-sh!" warned Fanny. "He's already here-his car's at the back, and he's lying down on the couch to rest. I didn't remember how old Jimmie was-but he was the last of Grandma Ladd's family."

"And you're not going to the party Rob? Come and tell me about it! said a voice-full and low, like Doctor

Rob's face went white. "Roberta Dickson, you got too hot!" colded Fanny. Rob heard him spring from the couch and cross to the door.

"Come on in here, Rob, and be a sport!" He took her by the arm.
"Why didn't you tell me—save me a trip to town?" she bantered.

"Oh, it's a shame the way I talked to you!" She hid her face and wept. "What on earth, Roberta, have you done?" exclaimed Fanny.

"Not a thing, Fanny dear!" assured Jimmie Ladd. "You run along and leave her to me. . . Don't cry, Rob! I'm the happlest fellow in the world-since you're not going to the party to meet Jen's cousin! Look; do you know who this is?"

He held before her a snapshot of her own self, taken at Jen's. "Bill Streeter gave me that-and I came all the way from Nevada be-cause of it." He wanted to add: "And, although I am a Ladd, I am clear across the continent from the poorhouse!" but he saved that for a later

Community in Sicily

Unchanged by Time Sicily for ages has been the meeting place and battleground of the races that contributed to civilize the West. It was on this island that the Greeks measured their strength against Phoe-nicia. Here Carthage fought her first duel against Rome. The ancients are gone, even their descendants are no more-except one colony which still Remotely situated on a high plain, isolated in the mountains, is a little Albanian community which has preserved its earliest traditions. Rarely marrying outside their own settlement, these people have maintained their racial characteristics and are pure-blooded descendants of the ancient Greeks. Piano dei Greci, as the little town is called, may be reached by motor car from Palermo. The distance is not great, but the road is very bad and at times the ascent is steep. Surrounded by islanders, all of whom are Sicilians, speaking the language of Italy and in religion Roman special jury, Horatio Bottomley was Catholics, these people have their own language, which closely resembles the ancient Greek, and in religion cling to the Greek Orthodox church. They are formerly employed by him. proud, fair-skinned people, many with blond hair and blue eyes. I have seen among them some of the prettiest children I have observed anywhere in

On fete days the women don a curious garb, wearing brightly colored gowns. The belts, which constitute the most conspicuous part of their attire, are heirlooms of solid gold or silver and represent the dowry which goes with an unmarried girl and is cherished during her married life as one of her dearest possessions. The gowns, also worn as wedding dresses, are made of costly silks, beautifully embroidered. Adorned with antique jewelry, they represent small fortunes and are handed down from one generation to another.—From "Seeing Italy," by E. M. Newman.
