Indian "Book of Genesis"

Washington.—An American aboriginal narrative poem, described as the Indian "Book of Genesis," has been translated into English.

The work was completed by J. N. Hewitt of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution after thirty years of work.

The poem traces the Indian conception of the creation of man and is expected to prove a valuable contribution to American letters, both for its intrinsic literary value and for the light it throws on the workings of the Indian mind in attempting to solve the eternal problem.

The bulk of the epic relates the adventures of the Dehaehiyawakho, an imaginary man-being who is called the master of life.

Before his "arrival and creation of man and the world" there was believed to have been a "sunless and moonless skyland, lighted only by the snowy white flowers of the great tree of light."

Much confusion is created in the mind of the average reader by the amazing phenomena detailed in the poem. This, Mr. Hewitt explains, is because of the unsimilarity of creative thought between Indian mythology and the workings of the more familiar and, consequently, better understood Greek and Roman mythology.

Dehaehiyawakho, for whose origin there is only nebulous explanation in the primitive lyrics is portrayed as the creator of man while his brother, Ohaa, roughly corresponds to the theological devil, according to Mr. Hewitt.

The creator won the government and rulership of all living things by a game of bowl and plum pits with his grandmother, in which he shook as dice the heads of chideeas kept magically alive and acting according to his bidding.

The songs and stories which generation after generation of Indians have handed down by word of mouth depict the thought and adventures of the two brothers.

They are prepared for their first appearance by Mr. Hewitt, who, deprecating the loss of emotional stress which is lent only by the Indian tongue, believes the beauty of the primitive imagination, which is retained in the translation, will compensate for this loss.

"BACKS" IN ABUNDANCE

Pickers of All-America football teams this season have been seeking out-of-the-ordinary Christmas suggestions. Too chic for words are these little mountings made of hard-as-ivory hand-polished and hand-carved wood. Their lovely natural brown tones tone in with the fashionable costume browns for this season. The bag which may be made of felt or velvet or any chosen fabric is sewed to the frame in the usual way, a row of perforations being made in the wood for the stitches.

USEFUL CHRISTMAS PRESENTS TO MAKE OR TO PURCHASE

Handbag or pocketbook frames of carved wood! Aye, there's an idea for bewildered minds who are seeking out-of-the-ordinary Christmas suggestions. Too chic for words are these little mountings made of hard-as-ivory hand-polished and hand-carved wood. Their lovely natural brown tones tone in with the fashionable costume browns for this season. The bag which may be made of felt or velvet or any chosen fabric is sewed to the frame in the usual way, a row of perforations being made in the wood for the stitches.

Italian Leathercraft

In beautiful Italy where art ever survives, hosts of skilled craftsmen are busy creating intriguing handbags of finely wrought leather. Almost unprecedented enthusiasm marks the present vogue for bags of the type illustrated, the leather of which they are made being hand illuminated and tooled in the inimitable Italian way. Some have zipper fastenings and leather-laced edges. Others are mounted on rare frames with handles. No Christmas gift suggestion one may make will outrival that of one of these choice bags. One of the many attractions of these bags is that they are obtainable in all the fashionable costume colors.

For the Little Folks

Here is where work is made play for the children. The cunning "dolloped" coat-hangers and hat stands which are so numerous in holiday displays, are enough to train any wee boy or girl to be orderly. Which is a hint to doting parents and relations as to "what to give" the little folks for Christmas.

Artful Glass Toiletries

If you're asking what's "smart" to give for Christmas, decorated glass toiletries is the answer. A bottle for every lotion or medicine, cold cream jars, powder boxes, soap dishes. Oh! there's no end to the intriguing articles to be had, each prettily painted, many in dainty flowers, others adopting unique designs like the little fish set in the picture.

Spot "Favored" by Murderers

Yonkers.—Westchester county authorities are faced with the third murder of a woman in the township of Greenburgh since last April, the decomposed and partly dismembered body of a young woman having been found in a gully off the Ardsley road, on the Yonkers-Greenburgh line.

The spot is three miles from where Earle Peacock burned his murdered wife's body last April, and about six miles from where some one shot down Mrs. Elsa Marshall and dragged her body into the woods a few weeks ago, just as the Peacock trial was coming to a close.

A young man, hunting in the woods near St. Andrew's Golf club, pushed his way through the heavy underbrush into the gully and stumbled over the body. He went to the home of District Attorney Coyne in Yonkers and told the prosecutor what he had found.

The prosecutor called several Yonkers policemen and the hunter guided them to the spot where he had seen the body.

The head and right hand were missing from the body. What little remained of the body was naked, except for a pair of black pumps on the feet. A cheap wedding ring and an imitation gold ring, with three glass stones in it, were on the left hand. The back of the neck was covered with thick dark reddish chestnut hair, which had been bobbed.

Coyne and the police examined the body minutely, in the hope of finding the mark of a weapon, but were unsuccessful. The body was moved to a morgue in Yonkers, where Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire examined it. Coyne said his opinion was that the body had been lying where it was found at least several weeks and possibly as much as three months. The body of Dorothy Peacock was found last April in a patch of woods, similar to the place where the latest body was found.

not telling what she will do when a fellow gets out his cigarette case and offers to light up for her.

A lot of us are good, not for mere goodness' sake, but for what goodness may bring us—security, reputation, advancement, freedom from gossip and criticism. In the old revival meetings which used to occupy a considerable amount of our attention during the winter months of my boyhood, the speaker spent a good deal of his time in warning his hearers against dangers and unpleasantnesses of hell. Men turned to goodness because of what virtue would help them to evade; they were good because of the incomparable things in the next world which goodness would bring them. There was little emphasis upon what immediate joy and happiness goodness in itself brought to one. We were urged to be good largely because of our inherent fear of being bad. It was really very poor psychology but we did not know so very much about psychology in those days.

Renfrew did remarkably well in his work last semester. I was curious to know what his real motive was in thus applying himself to a difficult task.

"Why, it was the only right thing to do," he said. "If father and mother are willing to trust me and sacrifice to send me the money to give me a chance to get an education, I ought to do the best I can. I'm not expecting praise or reward for doing right. There is enough pleasure in doing the right thing."

The story is told that when in the olden times the crusaders were entering the Holy City a prophetic confronted them and arrested their progress. In her hand she carried a brazier of live coals and on her shoulders a jar of water. When asked what these symbols meant she said, "The water is to put out the fires of hell and the coals to burn up the joys of heaven so that men might be good for goodness' sake."

GOODNESS FOR ITS OWN SAKE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Lizette is a very pretty, self-possessed young girl whom I met at a dinner dance. There was smoking in the lounge after the dinner was over and the young people were waiting to have the floor cleared so that they might dance, and, as is common these days, smoking by the young women. Lizette smiled and shook her head when her escort offered her a cigarette.

"No, thank you, I don't smoke," she said, but there was no criticism or reproof in her voice. "You're a good little girl," I said, for I really don't like a girl's smoking and I surmised that Lizette was refusing on principle.

"I don't mind smoking," she explained to me, "but father promised to give each of us girls a sport car if we would not smoke until after we were twenty-one. I haven't long to go."

It was not goodness, as I had supposed which had kept Lizette from smoking, but the hope of reward. When she has earned that there is

Safety Vest for Aviators

Washington.—A new oxygen-breathing device has just been perfected here, intended to prevent the drowning of aviators trapped by airplanes that crash in the water, or caught under their parachutes after a jump that brings them down into a river or the sea. It is the joint work of Chief Gunner C. L. Tibbals, well known for his inventions of submarine safety devices, and Frank H. Hobson of the naval bureau of construction and repairs. As yet it has received no official name, but is provisionally called the seaplane rescue safety vest.

Mr. Tibbals describes the new contrivance as "a sort of combined vest and belt, equipped with two long pieces of rubber hose through one of which the wearer inhales and through the other exhales; a nose clamp to prevent the sudden rush of water from suffocating him; a tiny canister containing soda lime, which serves to purify the breath while eliminating carbon dioxide, and a bottle containing sufficient oxygen to keep a man afloat at least half an hour after he has jumped into the water from his chute. However, if it so happens that the flyer has not had a chance to use his parachute and therefore hits the water while in the plane, he can readily gain access to a larger bottle always carried as an emergency measure in the ship. This will supply a human being for about an hour and a half."

Murphy Wedding Held; Many Murphys Attend

Troy, N. Y.—There was an all-Murphy wedding here recently. Vincent A. Murphy and Miss Catherine R. Murphy were the principals. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert C. Murphy, and the bridesmaid was Miss Eileen Murphy, sister of the bride, and the best man, Clarence R. Murphy, brother of the bridegroom. Even the ushers were Murphys.
