CLYMER MAN GETS BEAR IN A TRAP

A bear with a taste for honey was recently caught in a trap and killed by Clark Wilkins, of Clymer Indiana county. The animal had visited the Wilkins farm several times and cleaned out several skips of bees. Wilkins got tired of it.

He set a big bear trap one night but the invader evaded it and escaped after a big mess of honey. Next day the trap was set differently and the following morning when Wilkins went out he found the bear. He shot it a fine big two-year old with a fine pel.

Another bear that stole honey gave August Burger a great deal of trouble at Long Run. Traps failed to catch him and finally the farmer rigged up a network of wires with a bell. Some time ago the bell sounded a wild alarm. Burger rolled out of bed, picked up his trusty rifle and took a few shots at the bear. He missed, but the bear has not returned, according to recent reports.

One of the big bears shot up-State was brought down by Homer Harshberger and A. Harrington of Altoona. It was shot near Julian and weighed almost four hundred pounds. A V-brand on one ear identified it as one of several bears that had been trapped in Potter county three years ago and released in Blair county. In its carcass were two old bullets showing it had been shot and wounded about a year ago.
