WEED BULLETIN TO AID FARMERS ISSUED BY STATE

Harrisburg—Weeds cause an economic loss of $24,000,000 per year in Pennsylvania...

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained without cost by writing for General Bulletin No. 558 to the Office of Information, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

The bulletin describes 17 of the more common weeds growing in Pennsylvania and gives the instructions for their control and eradication.

It also contains general control information, information on herbicides, the state seed law and other information.

Included in the chapter on "Chemicals in Weed Control" is the following:

"Chemicals (herbicides) have been used in weed control for many years. Perhaps more progress has been made in their use during the last 25 years than in any previous period of equal length.

"There are so many controlling factors involved in the use of herbicides that their effectiveness is not always assured. Among these factors are weather conditions. If a herbicide controls weeds by contact with the surface of the leaves, rain immediately following the application may wash the chemical off before it has had time to injure the plant. On the other hand, if the weather is too dry, the chemical may crystallize on the leaf and fall off before the weed has been injured.

"The nature of the plant and soil conditions are other factors controlling the use of herbicides. The soil is often rendered unfit for the growth of a crop for too long a period, thus making the use of herbicides impractical. Sometimes desirable plants are injured. In general, the use of chemicals is more expensive than cultivation methods. On the other hand, there are places where cultivation methods cannot be used. Along highways and railroads, in tennis courts and other places herbicides are most practical and economical.

Among the chemicals in use as herbicides are: The chlorates—sodium, potassium, magnesium, and calcium; sodium arsenite, iron sulphate (copperas or green vitriol), copper sulphate (blue vitriol), zinc sulphate, ammonium thiocyanate, carbon bisulfide, sodium chloride (common salt), ethylene oxide, gasoline, kerosene and other oils."

NEW GOVERNOR WIELDS "AXE" ON PAT NAIRN AND ABOLISHES JOB

Harrisburg—Governor Arthur H. James last Thursday made his first reduction in the state payroll—he abolished the position of deputy secretary of mines in charge of bituminous coal.

James announced that Deputy Secretary of Mines Patrick F. Nairn of Pittsburgh had been dismissed and that the position would not be refilled.

He said the position involved an annual expense to the commonwealth of about $15,000.

"Pat" Nairn, who finds himself out of a $6,000 job two days after Governor James took office, is a former Johnstown and widely known among mining men in Western Pennsylvania.

While a resident of Johnstown approximately 15 years ago Nairn passed the examination for state mine inspector, a position to which he was appointed July 1, 1926. He was in charge of the Seventh Bituminous District, Allegheny County, until August, 1933, when he was transferred to the Fifteenth District (northern Cambria County), with headquarters and residence in Carrolltown.

Soon after George H. Earle became Governor, Nairn was promoted from $4,800 mine inspectorship to the position of deputy secretary of mines in charge of bituminous fields. Although Nairn's headquarters during the last four years were at Pittsburgh, he maintained his residence at Carrolltown.

Announcement of Governor James' decision to abolish the office of deputy secretary of mines came within a few days after his appointment of another former Johnstown—John Ira Thomas—to his cabinet as secretary of mines.

Under department of mining regulations, state mine inspectors are not required to present further qualifications after serving two four-year terms in order to continue in office. Announcement of James' decision to abolish the office of deputy secretary of mines for the bituminous area made no mention as to whether Nairn's status in the department would make him eligible to return to a mine inspectorship.

PROPOSES TO BAN SOCIAL DISEASES

Harrisburg—Precautionary measures aimed at preventing the spread of dread syphilis in Pennsylvania were contained in two bills introduced into the State Senate last Friday by Senator C. G. Wolfenden, Indiana Republican.

Wolfenden's bills were designed to afford Pennsylvania the same type of protection afforded by law in New York, New Jersey and other states.

Physicians and midwives would be required to take blood samples from prospective mothers, under the first bill, submit them to state-approved laboratory for a standard syphilis test and record on birth certificates the times and result of the tests. The laboratories, upon request, would perform the service gratis.

Under the second measure, marriage license applicants would be required to submit a physician's statement denoting blood tests within 30 days of application showing freedom from the disease or any communicable stage. In this case, too, a laboratory certificate attesting to performance of a blood examination would be attached to the physician's statement.
