STUDENTS TO TAKE SCHOLARSHIP TESTS FRIDAY, MARCH 17th

Examinations will be held March 18 for students who qualify to compete for the Senator John J. Haluska scholarships which are awarded each year to two Cambria County high school seniors. It was announced last Friday by Louis E. Sheehan, head of the Americanism committee of Post 294, American Legion.

Qualified students from schools in the Johnstown district will take the test in the Junior College division of the Central High School Building, and students from the county schools will be given the examination at the Ebensburg Courthouse.

In order to compete for the scholarship, students are first required to write an essay of between 800 and 1,000 words on the subject, "America's Contribution to Democracy."

The best essays are selected at the various schools and the student author of each is then eligible to take the scholarship examinations.

Two tests will be given, one in English and the second in general intelligence. Viers W. Adams will be in charge of the tests at the high schools, while the examinations at Ebensburg will be under the direction of Dr. Arthur M. Stull, superintendent of Cambria County schools.

Senator Haluska turned over the scholarships to the Cambria County Legion Committee to dispose of in the manner chosen. The scholarships are for Temple University, University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania State College or University of Pennsylvania.

NEW DEMANDS PLACED ON MODERN EDUCATION

Harrisburg — Dr. Lester K. Ade, Superintendent of Public Instruction, said recently that education for modern times must meet new interests and new demands created by progress. Some of the new interests and ideas which demand educational readjustment within our schools are the increasing number of functions of government, conservation, and unions and production associations. Other developments which call for consideration in modern education are the nationalization of agriculture and industry, the changes in the course of foreign relations, the shorter work hours, crime problems, and the transformed structure of the family.

These are part of a modern child's environment. If he is to live intelligently in this environment, he must become familiar with the factors that will inevitably confront him. This constitutes a definite responsibility of the modern school.

TWO OUTSTANDING FEATURES AT GRAND THEATRE, SATURDAY

Two outstanding attractions on one bill of fare is coming to the theatre patrons of the Grand theatre, Patton, on Saturday evening of this week. The first of these is Michael Whalen and a stellar cast in a comedy drama that will epp you on your toes, and is entitled "Pardon Our Nerve." It alone is well worth the admission price.

In feature No. 2 Dorothy Lamour fans, swing fans, Maxine Sullivan fans, romance fans, and just plain lovers of robust screen stories, will find all they want in "St. Louis Blues," a sparkling cocktail of drama, music and humor, which is as original as Miss Lamour's personality and as romantic as the famous song upon which the picture is based. It highlights the dramatic experience of a Broadway celebrity on the loose in the Mississippi region. Miss Lamour plays the celebrity who finds life for the first time aboard a showboat after running away from the demands and forced glamour of the theatrical world.

Don't miss this double bill.

"WELL! WELL! WHAT'S THIS?"

"That Long Distance call I made to Aunt Sarah last month cost only a dollar! "She lives nearly 450 miles from here so I thought it would be more. Guess I've been 'way wrong on the cost of Long Distance calls."

Most people do guess far too high on Long Distance rates. Look over the typical rates in the front pages of your directory. Note especially how much you save after 7 at night and all day Sunday. Take advantage of these savings for calls to the folks back home.

SPEED IS CALLED NO. 1 AUTO ACCIDENT CAUSE

Ticket Fixing Also Indicted As Second By Traffic Safety Expert; Five Rules Proposed.

Strict enforcement of reasonable speed limits remains the No. 1 corrective for America's annual and unwanted harvest of street and highway crashes, according to Julien H. Harvey, widely known authority on accident prevention measures and managing director of the National Conservation Bureau.

Next to speeding Mr. Harvey ranks ticket fixing as a primary contributor to the national traffic accident toll, which every year exacts payment in thousands of persons killed, hundreds of thousands injured, and billions of dollars wasted.

"There isn't a community in the country, however, large or small," declares Mr. Harvey, "that can not have an inexpensive and efficient accident prevention program which will produce results. Cumulative experience has demonstrated that effective safety does not call for fancy panaceas. It is more responsive to the home-spun principles of plain common sense."

"Consider the case of Worcester, Massachusetts, an average American community. The police department, firmly supported by local authorities and civic bodies, set out in the Fall of 1938 to enforce speed limits rigidly and absolutely ban ticket-fixing — with no exceptions. In four months traffic deaths were reduced 50 per cent, injuries 60 per cent, and ambulance calls for automobile crashes dropped 78 per cent.

"Worcester is now in the process of putting into effect a well-rounded traffic safety program, in the making of which engineers of the National Conservation Bureau co-operated. It contains no magic; its ingredients are merely enforcement to curb the lawlessness, education to teach the unformed, and engineering to iron out troubles at accident-prone intersections."

Mr. Harvey has outlined five cardinal principles by which the enforcement authorities—police, courts, motor vehicle departments and engineers—can improve traffic hazards in co-operation with the schools:

1. Establish reasonable speed limits—with due regard to congestion in cities and more open roads in rural sections—and then enforce them as rigorously as every law which protects the life and property of citizens.
2. Stop ticket-fixing, without favoritism or fear; but if necessary resort to court summons to break up this evil practice.
3. Make tests for drivers' licenses fair but stringent; deny no qualified applicant the privilege to operate a motor vehicle, but be prompt to revoke that privilege for those who cannot or will not conform, remembering that human lives may be the forfeit for leniency.
4. Establish and maintain a thorough safe driving course in your high schools, remembering that of 7,500,000 youngsters now in high school throughout country, approximately 75 per cent will be driving automobiles soon.
5. Eliminate accident-breeding conditions at intersections and other hazardous locations by applying sound traffic engineering principles.

As head of the National Conservation Bureau, accident prevention department of the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives, Mr. Harvey directs the program of an organization that long has pioneered in the safety movement, not only as regards traffic but also in industry, the home, and recreational pursuits as well. Before heading the National Conservation Bureau he was in charge of the Greater New York Safety Council.

"Communities will always find their police and other law enforcement agencies ready to make safety work if the public reasonably supports their efforts," he says from long study and experience. "But when policemen arrest offenders, only to learn in court that they have used 'pull' to get a ticket fixed and thereby escape punishment, is it any wonder that officers become first discouraged and then, perhaps, careless."

"Good citizens who want their communities to be safe must come to the help of their enforcement authorities. Expert drivers not only obey speed limits, but when necessary suit their speed to existing conditions on street and highway. Above all, good drivers should regard it as dishonorable and not sporting to have a ticket fixed. The best of us will sometimes make mistakes in driving; but it takes a thoroughbred to admit it."

"Similarly, pedestrians must remember that they, too, have a definite obligation. They should observe proper precaution when crossing streets."

STATE TO SHIP 13,000,000 TREES

Harrisburg — More than 2,000,000 private planters from all sections of Pennsylvania have ordered forest tree seedlings for Spring planting, the Department of Forests and Waters reports.

The orders range in number from 1,000 trees, the minimum, to 60,000 trees. These orders, in addition to those from Federal and State Agencies have been assigned to the various nurseries operated by the Department for Spring shipping.

More than 13,000,000 seedlings and transplants will be shipped to the various planters. Stock of most species is exhausted. However, there are yet available supplies of black locust, pitch pine, and Bank's pine.

Orders are already being received for planting stock for use during the
