UNITED STATES BUREAU OF MINES WILL LIKELY HANDLE GUFFEY ACT

Washington.—Legislators and coal men expressed opinion this week the Bituminous Coal Commission created to fix minimum prices to stabilize the coal industry would become a subdivision of the Bureau of Mines within a few weeks.

Representatives of the Commission, abolished by President Roosevelt's reorganization order—and the interior department, to which the order transferred the commission's functions, and of coal organizations, all agreed "we can only guess at what will be done."

However, a consensus showed: 1—The commission probably would become a part of the Bureau of Mines, in which the commission's statistical bureau formerly was located.

2—The chief of the Bureau of Mines or an administrator probably would direct future activities. Some thought a committee of three, or possibly four persons might be designated as the administrative head of the division.

3—There would be no major effort in congress to halt effectiveness of the reorganization order, which would become effective in 60 days unless overridden by Congress. Some coalmen predicted efforts would be made to place the reorganization into effect within a short time after the plan became effective.

Through all the discussions ran an undercurrent of uncertainty whether the original aim of the Guffey Coal Act—minimum prices for sale of soft coal at the mines—could be accomplished under the reorganization.

Legislators and coal experts alike referred to court rulings that an administrator who fixed prices must do so personally and could not merely sign orders prepared by subordinates.

Under the ruling it was pointed out that Secretary Ickes—or the administrator if one were named—would have to familiarize himself with the 30,000 pages of testimony and statistics gathered by the coal commission during the last two years. Some experts contended that even long study would be insufficient and argued that the courts would not uphold prices fixed by a man who had not participated in hearings on which the prices were based.

Suggestions also were advanced that the reorganization also might result in one or more of these steps.

1—Abandonment entirely of the plan for fixing prices.

2—Postponement of effectiveness of the order until after the commission could complete its price fixing job—commissioners have said the task will require from 60 to 90 days.

3—A new start on the gathering of statistics and retracing of the entire work performed by the commission.

4—Legislation to fix minimum prices were based on the information the commission has gathered.

5—Including a majority of the commissioners in the new division to complete the price fixing job.

Commencement exercises will be held at St. Francis College, Loretto, at 2:30 p. m., Monday, May 29th, and at Mt. Aloysius' Academy, Cresson, on Wednesday morning, June 7th, according to announcement made Saturday by Most Rev. Bishop Richard T. Guilfoyle.

Baccalaureate services will be conducted at the Loretto college on Sunday, May 28th. If weather is favorable the service will be held out of doors, on the college campus.
