

Charles Comiskey II, Heir to White Sox

Upon the shoulders of Charles Comiskey II may some day fall the responsibility of carrying on the name Comiskey, famous in baseball. The young man, now 13, shares equally with his two sisters in ownership of one-half of the Chicago White Sox, American League baseball club. His father, John Louis Comiskey, who died recently, left the entire holdings to his widow and three children, expressing in his will the desire that ownership in the club be kept in the Comiskey family at least until his youngest child attains the age of 35 years.

PAYMENTS LISTED FOR FOURTH-CLASS SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Fourth class school districts in Cambria county will receive a total of $235,355.47 from the state as reimbursements for salaries paid to school teachers and for public schools, according to announcement made last week by Warren S. Roberts, state auditor general.

The payments will be made in accordance with the state school code which provides that school districts of this class receive from the state a percentage of the annual minimum salaries prescribed by the code, based on the true valuation per teacher of assessable property. A sum of $200 is apportioned by the superintendent of public instruction annually for each school permanently closed or discontinued in a fourth class district.

In Cambria county East Conemaugh Borough will receive the largest payment, $16,404.09, while Barnesboro Borough, Patton Borough, Portage Borough, Spangler Borough and Summerhill Township will receive payments of over $10,000. Payments to be made to fourth class districts in the county, follow:

Sunday School Teaching Gives Clew to Sheriff

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Experience which Sheriff Ralph Elser had as assistant Sunday School teacher helped him solve an extortion mystery.

A farmer, G. C. Rousch, received a note which read: "A warning, Mr. Rousch. If you want to live a lifetime bring $5,000 and place on corner at stand on end of lane by nine o'clock tonight."

The sheriff thought the sentence structure and spelling were familiar. A former pupil in the sheriff's Sunday School class confessed that he sent the note.

Playing Hooky No Fun Now
PASADENA, CALIF.—"Playing hooky" from school isn't the good old sport it used to be before the day of automobile police patrols and radio equipment. Two youngsters and two girls who tried it from the Monrovia high school were quickly picked up by a police patrol car and given 15 minutes in which to get back to school.

'Fainting Dips' Are Busy on West Coast

SAN FRANCISCO.—Police have advised the public to refrain temporarily from rushing to the aid of girls who apparently faint on the street. Several citizens while enacting this Good Samaritan role recently have been "rolled" of their roll. Police are convinced it is merely an epidemic and will withdraw their warning after it has passed.

INDIAN TIPPLE IS LIQUID LIGHTNING

Peruvian Tribe Has World's Stiffest Drink.

CHICAGO.—The world's stiffest drink is not to be found in any bottles lined behind a tavern bar, nor in a "kag" of "forty rod" in an Ozark cabin, nor in a jug of Oklahoma liquid lightning. Nor in any combination of these.

The drink providing the greatest "wallop"—and resultant hangover—is found among the Quecha Indians in the Peruvian montana region.

The name of this potent liquid is "ayahuasca." Llewellyn Williams, curator of the Field Museum of Natural History, described it after a trip into the Quecha country.

"The name 'ayahuasca' derives from the dialect words aya, meaning death, and huasca, meaning vine."

The drink has a "rapid and violent" effect on the system, Williams said.

Ayahuasca is served by the medicine man at tribal gatherings. Portions average about a cupful.

"In about two minutes the effect of ayahuasca becomes apparent to the bystander," Williams noted.

"The drinker turns pale and begins to tremble violently. He becomes very dizzy."

The second stage is "charming." The drinker announces he sees landscapes, fruit-laden trees, brightly-colored birds and other beautiful things in a rosy world.

The transition to the next stage is sudden and violent. The drinker becomes unable to stand, and has hallucinations of snakes, tigers and supernatural beings preparing to attack him.

"He howls and groans mournfully, and screams unintelligible words," the curator reported.

When the Indian "comes to" a brigade of friends must sit on him or he will seize his weapons and attack the first person he encounters.

The final stage is the beginning of a hangover of several days' duration. After the drinker's friends have held him down until the desire to fight leaves him, he becomes lethargic and lapses into unconsciousness.

When, finally, the Indian recovers, there is a feeling of "heavy drowsiness and a headache which lasts for several days."

The drink is used by the Indians to eliminate fear and stimulate reckless bravery. It is described as "strongly habit forming."

River Man Says Glamour Exists on Mississippi

ST. LOUIS.—The Mississippi river may have lost much of its glamour when it was replaced as a travel medium by more modern methods of transportation, but it has never lost its charm and appeal to rivermen, according to Capt. William Baptiste.

Baptiste, a 44-year-old steamboat captain who received a degree in engineering and served in the United States army air corps during the World War before taking to the river, said the large and colorful crowds lining the levees of river towns have passed, but the stream has retained its old spirit of friendliness.

He said he seldom leaves his boat for any great length of time.

"I always want to get back to the peace and quiet of the river," he explained. "The noise of the city would make a nervous wreck of me within a few days."

Baptiste, the son of a St. Louis tent manufacturer, grew up on the river front here.

Horse Gone, Barn Shut And Idea Is All Right

BROCKTON, MASS.—So, it's stupid to lock the barn after the horse is gone, eh? Not if you know your horses, says Sam Mendelson.

When one of his horses disappeared, Mendelson shut tight the stable door so that the others wouldn't follow. Errant Dobbin apparently became lonesome for his stablemates after his nocturnal solo spree—for the next morning Mendelson heard a plaintive whinny, and there before the barn door stood the truant.

Dies at the Throttle on His Official Last Run

HORNELL, N. Y.—An Erie railroad train roared into Hornell with Engineer Arthur C. Porter at the throttle.

It was to be Engineer Porter's last run, and he gazed fondly at familiar scenes. Suddenly he beckoned to Fireman H. C. Harrington to take charge of the locomotive. Then the engineer slumped to the floor of the cab.

The fireman brought the train to a stop. Porter was dead when a doctor examined him.
