FARMERS VIST FIELDS OVER THE COUNTY

Methods of improving pasture were outlined last Thursday afternoon by E. J. Walter, agronomy specialist at the Penn State College, to more than a score of farmers who visited the farms of Englebert Farabaugh, Loreto, R. D., and John Norman Griffith, in Cambria Township. Mr. Walter pointed out the excellent results that have been obtained by Mr. Farabaugh and Mr. Griffith in improving their pastures.

At a meeting held earlier in the day at the courthouse, Mr. Walter urged the farmers to be patient in their endeavors to improve their pastures. He asserted that about one and one-half tons, of finely ground limestone should be applied to each acre of pasture land, together with 400 pounds of 20 per cent phosphate. It is not necessary, he asserted, to spread additional fertilizer on the ground until the lime and phosphate has accomplished its work.

The lime and phosphate will not only increase pasture production, he asserted, but the improved herbage will also aid in obtaining higher milk production. Mr. Walter urged the farmers to act now to improve their pastures, declaring that "the price of milk will increase as times become better."

Crippled Old Lady Takes Broomstick to Burglar

NEW YORK.—A tiny Irish lady, turning 61, her arm and leg still stiff and weak from old injuries, grabbed a broomstick and beat the living daylight out of a husky Negro who climbed into her apartment and demanded her money.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Quinn, flailed the Negro until he screamed for help and fled. She banged him on the head until he dived through the window and ran down the fire escape and disappeared.

"There was only one dollar in the house," Mrs. Quinn said later to a newspaper man, "but he was not going to get that."

Retired Blacksmith Takes 22-Mile Jaunt Every Day

CLEVELAND.—C. W. Kaighin, 76 years old, believes he leads all his fellow citizens in this city when it comes to long-distance walking. Kaighin takes his daily exercise by walking from the downtown area to suburban Rocky river and back again, or from public square to suburban Euclid and back. Each trip is about 22 miles.

He spent most of his life—until 1933—working as a blacksmith. "I ran all the way to get my first job as an apprentice," he said. "I guess I've liked to walk and run ever since. No, I can't run those 22 miles every day. Walking is good enough exercise, anyway."

Always Getting Hit WALSENBURG, COLO.—Five times now Ernest Tafaya, 12 year old newspaper boy of this place, has been knocked down by automobiles and each time he has come up smiling. "Never got hardly a scratch out of all five accidents," said the boy. "I must be like a cat." All five accidents have occurred in a two year period.

A Taste for Turkey Helps Capture Thief

CLEVELAND.—His taste for turkey led to the arrest of Charles Calloway. Calloway couldn't resist eating turkey tidbits in merchandise, he left a greasy fingerprint on a cigarette machine. Captured while trying to enter another place, his prints were found to match the one on the vending machine.

RATS PLAY MARBLES FOR THEIR DINNER

It's All in the Interest of Scientific Experiment.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Three rats are playing marbles on the University of Minnesota campus—all in the interest of a scientific experiment to determine if they can work together as a team.

Dr. William T. Haron, head of the animal psychology department, said the object of the experiment was to discover if rats can co-operate in a given task as do human beings, and, because thought processes of rats are not unlike those of man, to shed further light on man's habits in modern society.

The rats are co-operating in the research because if they don't play marbles they don't eat. And hunger, Dr. Haron explained, is the only real motivating factor in their lives.

The marble game is taking plenty of time. Already the rats have been at it four months. Here's how the game has developed so far:

Late last fall the marbles were placed on a ledge in the cage, so the rats could knock them off accidentally. And as each marble rolled off, an electric hookup released a pellet of food in the rats' dish.

In short order the rats learned that when they wanted to eat they had to knock the marble off the ledge. But then the experimenters made the game more difficult, requiring that the marbles be rolled up a slight incline and through a small hole.

At present the rats are learning the hardest part of the game—that of their working as a team. One must roll a marble about six inches, the second must lift one over a small ledge, while the third pushes a marble up an incline.

And when the rats learn their present task, they will be put in a cage together. They will be required to handle one marble—each doing his particular job.

'Lamb' Snatcher' Leaves Woolly Trail for the Law

WAUSEN, OHIO.—While evidently mentally wool-gathering, a lamb thief didn't do very well at the real thing—he left too many live clues behind him for the benefit of deputy sheriffs on his trail. The sheriffs turned sleuths when Simon Rychener of Pittsview reported the theft of 16 lambs. The deputies decided to trail the thief in a systematic way.

First they visited the Rychener pasture and found a trailer gate lying in the road. Their second clue was a license plate in the road. They proceeded down the road and found one of the victims of the "lamb-napper," which had escaped from the thief, bleating forlornly. The deputies continued driving down the road, stopping at farms and collecting the loot the thief had lost.

By this time the deputies were finding it's pretty stuffy crowded in a sedan with 12 lambs, but they persevered and reached the end of their trail at the Bowling Green (Ohio) home of Calvin Heinman—stock buyer and owner of the lost license plate and trailer gate. The sheriff-deputies obtained a confession from Heinman and the four remaining stolen lambs which were in his barn.

The lamb thief retraced his wool-gathering route—but to the county jail this time instead of to the Rychener pasture.

Canary Bursts Into Song; Nearly Wins Court Case

PORTLAND, ORE.—A "songless" canary threw the municipal court into a quandary when it burst forth into song.

Court was hearing the case of Jack Sitsler, 40, charged with having sold worthless singing canaries that couldn't utter a peep for unreasonable prices.

As witness after witness testified against Sitsler, the defense's exhibit A, a supposedly mute canary, began to carol wildly.

However, Judge Julius Cohn found Sitsler guilty and levied a $50 fine and a jail term.

Girls Aged 7, 8 and 9 Explain Nether Region

LONDON.—Three small girls were chief witnesses in a case heard by Port Talbot magistrates.

The clerk explained to them the importance of the oath. He said to them, one by one, "You know what happens to little girls who tell lies, don't you?"

Here are their answers: First girl (aged nine)—Yes, they go to—er, the burning fire. Second girl (aged eight)—Yes, sir. They go to the burning fire. Third girl (aged seven)—They go to hell.
