SOME FACTS CONCERNING RHEUMATISM GIVEN BY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

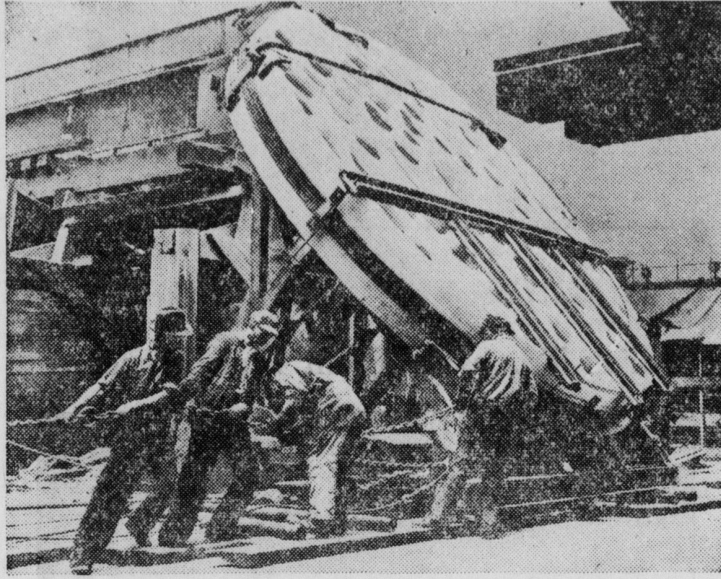

Rheumatism is a term loosely used to include all sorts of ailments affecting the nerves, muscles and joints.

There is a condition which usually has its beginnings during childhood in which the joint involvement is but one of the several manifestations. This may be termed "juvenile rheumatism."

It is an infectious disease which invades various tissues of the body. The heart, the points and their surrounding structures, and the nervous system are chiefly affected.

It is estimated that this condition comprises from 3 to 7 per cent of all medical diseases observed in children's

Glass—20 Tons of It—Handle With Care

Using house-moving technique, workmen move the original 200-inch glass disc of a Corning, N. Y., glass works through a gap which was cut in a railroad trestle. An entire section of trestle and tracks had to be removed so that the huge 20-ton telescope eye and its special steel cradle could pass. The disc is the largest single piece of glass in the world.

hospitals. School children between the ages of 6 and 11 are most often affected.

The cause of the disease is not known.

A child who is handicapped with diseased tonsils or weakened by repeated and prolonged respiratory infections is more likely to become a victim of "juvenile rheumatism."

The child complains of vague pains in the region of the joints or muscles and these complaints are sometimes dismissed as "growing pains."

Or the child may complain of cramp like pain in the legs or legache.

The heart is involved in from 60 to 70 per cent of such cases.

Long periods of rest, nourishing food and good hygiene are recommended for victims of "juvenile rheumatism."

A LESSON FROM HOLLAND

The American people can learn a valuable lesson from the lifeguards at the beaches of Holland.

For, according to an item in the Dairyman's League News of New York, these guards made a practice of drinking a glass of milk every hour to give them greater endurance.

Medical men and dieticians often observe that the per capita consumption of milk in this country—by both the children and adults—is far lower than it should be, in the interests of health. Few foods contain as much nutritive value as milk, few are more palatable, and few are less expensive. A national milk consumption double or more than existing today, would result in marked betterment of the average standard of health, and, incidentally, it would mean a great deal to the dairy farmer, who has been faced with excessive production over consumption.
