

LEAVES TO TURN HERE EARLIER THAN USUAL

The leaves on thousands of trees in the State Forests have already assumed their autumnal coloration. G. Albert Stewart, Secretary of the Department of Forests and Waters, said today.

Secretary Stewart stated that the unusual weather this year has hastened the coloring. Ordinarily autumnal coloration reaches its height in the northern half of this State during early October and during late October in southern counties, but it is expected that this change will take place sooner during the current year.

"Pennsylvania's 110 different trees and almost 200 kinds of different shrubs offer a gorgeous array of fall coloration which is not surpassed by any other state or country," Stewart said. "Broad leaved, or deciduous trees and shrubs comprise about 90 per cent of the woody plants found growing in their natural habitats and these are the species with varied hues. Scattered evergreens, such as pine, hemlock, laurel and rhododendron present a pleasing contrast."

"When selecting shrubs and trees for planting, especially for their coloration, it is best to choose the native species. One should bear in mind that very few trees or plants are uniform in their coloration. Trees having variegated tints comprising all shades of purple, crimson, scarlet, orange, yellow on the same or different individuals of a similar species include red, sugar, striped and mountain maples, Juneberry and sassafras. The leaves of the black gum, red oak, scarlet oak and dogwood and sumac usually change to purple, crimson or scarlet. White ash leaves vary from dark chocolate to clear brown and salmon but no red color."

"Predominance of green with slight or considerable mixture of purple, red or yellow is common to mountain ash, hawthorne, cherry, plum, peach, pear and apple. Autumn leaves of butternut, elm, elderberry and chestnut are rusty green and yellow. Tulip poplar, aspen and birch change to a pure yellow of different shades."

Secretary Stewart said that the public is invited to enjoy the autumnal beauty of the State Forests but urged that caution be exercised in the use of fire.

TO DIFFER NOT DISUNITY

Democracy Free Expression And Interchange of Ideas

Strangers to our shores are often confused by the apparent lack of unity, by the vociferous expression of differences of opinion, by the heated arguments over everything and nothing, and by what they think must be undemocratic tendencies in our social life.

"How can such things happen in a democracy?" they say. "If a democracy makes all men equal, then why does everyone criticize everyone else?"

What they fail to realize is that this variance of opinions is democracy. It is a free expression and interchange of ideas. The difference of opinion is not that of enmity, but rather that of an exchange of views in a large family, diametrically apposed to each other in their choice of desserts or movie stars but basically in harmony when anything of importance comes up, and ready to act as a family once there is a decision made that affects the good of any or all.

The points of difference in America are far less important than the points of agreement. We may seem to de-

How Pontiac is Helping America Prepare

Pontiac's part in National Defense is the production of rapid-fire cannons for the U. S. Navy. To speed this all-important task, Pontiac has two cadence plants—one in operation and one under construction—manned by thousands of skilled craftsmen working night and day building this cannon which naval authorities say is "the most effective weapon of its size ever produced." Pontiac may build fewer cars, but our part in National Defense will never be neglected.

vote more time to them and to grow more articulate over them, but as a people we speak more of non-essentials than of those more serious things to which we give allegiance. We still have the shyness of the idealist.

It should be remembered that the people who settled this country all wanted one thing—freedom to live their own lives and to gain for themselves and their descendants a better life than they had known. One thing that has kept America growing rather than static has been that for every man there has been the hope that his children would go further and fare better than he had, both economically and socially. Our greatest unifying force is the ideal of religious, social, political and economic opportunity which in the last analysis motivates the majority of our citizens.

Because we have this inheritance of freedom, we can be intelligently a united nation—not in slavish obedience to orders, but because in times of emergency we choose to act as one people, never abdicating our rights to differ or to express that difference. We are one because we are free to know the truth and to speak it. We do not have to have it kept from us. In every time of crisis we have proven that we can stand together. We will not fall now.
