RUSSELL ADMITS RELIEF IS BELOW COST OF LIVING

Harrisburg.—Maximum allowances for individuals and families receiving relief or aid to dependent children are "considerably below the average cost of purchasing total budget requirements," Howard L. Russell, assistant secretary reports. "Living costs rose abruptly during 1941," he said in a survey submitted to the Governor, "and in December were at the highest point recorded since the inception of depression-born relief programs in Pennsylvania."

Indexes of living costs for wage earners and lower salaried workers compiled by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics were 9.4 per cent above year ago levels. Russell's study showed a generally parallel increase in the cost of living at an assistance level.

"Average figures for the state as a whole," the secretary reported, "show that for one person, the maximum relief allowance will cover 85 per cent of average costs. For a family of four persons the corresponding figure is 79 per cent, for a family of seven, 71 per cent, and for a family of 10, 69 per cent."

Russell pointed out that the dominant factor in the rise in living costs was a marked jump in the price of food, explaining this is especially important from the standpoint of public assistance because the allowance for food makes up about half the average budget.

Russell then commented that there was no chance of increased grants "until the state's financial picture is clarified," announcing that at the earliest it would be around the first of June.

Relief payments range from a minimum of $3.50 a week for a single person in rural counties to a maximum of $4.75 a week in metropolitan areas. For a family of five in rural areas a minimum of $11.90 is fixed with a maximum of $13.40 in metropolitan sections.

STATE FARM CALENDAR

Avoid Early Fasting.

There are two objections to early pasteurizing: first, it is hard on the pasture, and second, the cows do not get enough feed. Penn State dairy specialists say that if pastures are to produce a maximum amount of feed during the summer they must be allowed a good start, grow a root system and establish a sod before tops are eaten off.

Feed Ewes and Lambs

Ewes that have twin lambs should be separated from and fed more liberally than those mothering single lambs. Livestock specialists at the Pennsylvania State College also recommend that lambs have access to a grain mixture and some good second cutting alfalfa or clover hay.

Wheat is Swine Feed

Livestock specialists at the Pennsylvania State College report that when corn is worth $1 a bushel, wheat is worth $1.17 a bushel as feed for swine.

Grow Sorghum

Many farmers are planning to grow sorghum in use as a preservative in the making of grass and legume silage.

STATE C. I. O. COUNCIL ADOPTS "LABOR UNITY FOR VICTORY" POLICY

Harrisburg.—The Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council, powerful C. I. O. affiliate, last Thursday adopted a "labor unity for American victory" theme for its annual convention to be held in Pittsburgh May 6-8.

John A. Phillips, council president, said labor-management policies will be adopted to conform to pledges of national union leaders to President Roosevelt last month when he told an emergency conference of 500 C. I. O. representatives that their labor must meet Axis threats.

The C. I. O. leaders answered with an unanimous resolution reaffirming their no-strike policy and a promise that the "Herculean efforts of the workers will produce the tanks, airplanes, guns and ships necessary for an immediate offensive against the Axis powers to achieve victory in 1942."

"We will follow that lead," Phillips said "with concentration on the mobilization of man power for the war effort. Everything else will be subordinate at the May convention."

Preserve Spring Eggs

Fine quality eggs produced now when prices are lower can be preserved in water glass for use later when prices are higher. One quart of water glass in nine quarts of cooled, boiled water will be enough to preserve about 15 dozen eggs in a five-gallon stone crock, say Penn State poultry specialists.

Prevent Farm Fires

So-called good housekeeping around the farm premises brings its own reward in the reduction of farm fire losses, remind agricultural engineers at the Pennsylvania State College. Trash should be cleaned out wherever it is found.

ARTERIES

Speaking of rubber—how about the arteries.

The arteries are the vessels through which the blood passes from the heart to various parts of the body.

These minute tubes are not like the metal pipes that carry water through the building—they are elastic.

There is a condition known as arteriosclerosis, usually associated with aging, in which the arteries lose this elasticity.

Arteriosclerosis is generally considered a degenerative process of advancing years.

New evidence has been presented to indicate that some of this hardening of the arteries may be inflammatory.

Mass Decorations at Hickam Field

Here are two views of the decoration ceremonies at Hickam Field, Hawaii, the largest mass decoration ceremony in U. S. Army history. A total of 141 men received decorations—some of them the purple heart award—while bands played and fighter planes whirled overhead in honor. The men, many in wheel chairs, are assigned to duty at Hickam Field.
