

SOLIDARITY

By the Honorable Henry A. Wallace, the Vice President of the United States

(An abstract of an address delivered at Omaha, Nebraska on the evening of March 14, 1942.)
A World War forces all of us to think in terms larger than our own farm, our own county, our own state, our own Nation, our own hemisphere. We are forced to lift our eyes to the distant horizons of time and space. We are forced to recognize the travesty and the organizing ability of people who speak other languages and have other religions.

I hope that each of the twenty-six United Nations will engage in a friendly rivalry to see who best can serve the common cause. Let no unconscious tool of the Axis rumor-mongers impair that solidarity among the United Nations which guarantees an inflexible purpose to fight this war through to a victorious end.

Solidarity is vital among the nations of the New World. And so we need to reach a common understanding with our neighbors to the north and south.

The unity of the hemisphere is so important to our future safety that I hope the farmers of the U. S. will do everything possible to approach the problem of competitive agricultural products in the spirit of international commodity agreements rather than in the spirit of competitive hate. Remember that economic warfare too easily leads to military warfare. Nazi propagandists, working skillfully in the background, will do their best to poison relations between us.

Not one of the 26 free peoples of the United Nations is a "master race." We leave the foolishness of the "master race" idea to the Nazis and the Japanese. The proudest thing we in the U. S. can say about ourselves is that we are human beings, and that we are fighting for a decent chance for all human beings everywhere in the world. That goes not only for the people of France and Norway, of Greece and China, but also for the unwilling victims of terror in Germany, Italy and Japan. Here in the U. S. we have millions of good loyal citizens whose ancestors came from one or another of these countries. No one knows better than these loyal citizens that there are millions in these enemy countries who hate dictatorship, tyranny and brutal oppression just as passionately as we do.

Increasingly everywhere over the whole world people will begin to appreciate in 1942 that a world without nations is fighting for a world without nations or class distinction. It is this world-wide understanding which will eventually crack the morale of the German and Japanese people at the very moment when they seem to be closest to winning.

Not long ago I saw a patriotic "ad" which said, "Beyond every mountain lies a valley." Today we are struggling to find our way through the pass of the mountain we have set to cross. We shall not stop until we reach the valley.

Our God is a God of bottles as well as a God of peace. Our God is a God of righteous indignation as well as of long-suffering kindness. We know the justice of our cause and our duty to the world. We shall go forward to a glorious sunrise, no matter how dark the night.

SKUNK IS RATED AS A VERY VALUABLE ANIMAL—WHETHER OR NOT YOU AGREE

If you think that the much-maligned skunk is just something to be avoided—guess again!

He's lined up for a very important part in the nation's war program, and for the protection of a closed season.

Seth Gordon, executive secretary of the State Game Commission, explained the animal's fur is ideal for lining uniforms of soldiers dying in sub-zero temperatures. Its carcass provides fat and glycerine vital for production of many materials.

Furthermore, said Gordon, "the skunk is a much misunderstood animal."

"Orchardists are loud in their praise of the skunk because of its insect eating habits and trappers rely on its fur to provide the bulk of their annual income of about $1,000,000."

The State Legislature a score of years ago placed the skunk under protection of a closed season for its hunting and trapping but later the bars were let down.

On advice of the federal government this year a protective trapping season has been set up from November 10th to January 15th, when the fur and carcass are in their prime.

Pigs Like Greens
Experiments at Penn State College show that pigs on good pasture need only three-fourths as much concentrates for comparable gains as pigs fed in the drylot.

Stop Garden Insects
One way to reduce the number of insects in the garden is to clean up all weeds, thick grass, woody growth and leaves. Entomologists of Penn State College say that insects are over winter in such places and then come out to make their home on the vegetable plants.

Care for Heating System
All types of farmhouse heating systems require some care during the summer if expensive repairs are to be avoided. Generally, the system should be cleaned and smoke pipes be kept dry. Ask about other points on the several systems.

Better Breeding Pays
Dairy cows are limited by inheritance in their production of milk and butterfat. Only sires that improve the production of their daughters over that of the dams should be used. For profit, give good cows proper care and adequate feed.

Gardening is Popular
Vegetable gardening is engaging the attention of 4-H Club members all over Pennsylvania. Club leaders at Penn State report that members are making sure their families have plenty of vegetables this year.

Enough steel goes into bottle caps each year to make at least 30 "ugly ducking" freighters.
