PROHIBITION FORCES ARE keeping an eye open for any chance that might bob up due to the war to again foist that calamity upon the nation, as was done during World War I. But this time it won't work. Dry sentiment is, however gaining a bit—but not enough to be serious. Strict enforcement of liquor laws is the best manner of avoiding prohibition. The experience we had with the era of "dryness" brought only lawlessness and a gangsterism such as the nation had never before known. There are many evils now in the liquor law set-up in this state. They should be corrected.

HOWEVER, ANY ATTEMPT TO foist Prohibition on the country at this time would be a betrayal of the men and women in our armed forces—and the embroiling of the nation in a controversy so purely domestic and basically social would be a costly distraction from our one, all-out purpose—winning the war. It is up to us at home to devote our full attention to speedy and efficient settlement of all issues which have to do with the winning of the war. Prohibition has no part in that.

DON'T BUY BOOTLEG AUTOMOBILE tires. You can well be sorry! In several counties of western Pennsylvania there has been a flood of illegally remolded and regrooved tires which literally "fall apart" after a few miles of driving, the Office of Price Administration has warned. The common method of gyping the tire-hungry motorist is to buy up junk tires and force them into molds of a smaller tire. "Terrific" heat and pressure is then applied, and the loose rubber found in the tire shoulders is forced upward, simulating deep, rich grooves. A dash of rubber paint is then applied and the eager buyer sees what is apparently a brand new job.

IN SOME INSTANCES SUCH doctored tires have blown out within a few blocks, investigators declared. All remolding and regrooving, including the system of cutting in grooves with irons, has been banned by order of the War Production Board. Persons buying such tires are breaking the law equally with the sellers. Buyers are also warned to observe ceiling prices on second hand tires, since they will be deemed equally guilty with sellers who violate the price limit regulations.

CERTAINLY, A YEAR AGO NO one thought that the tires on our cars would so completely upset our mode of transportation. Now we're going to have nationwide gasoline rationing, just because of saving the rubber. On Thursday of this week all over the nation the speed limit of motor vehicles will be cut to a maximum of thirty-five miles per hour, and there will be stiff federal penalties for all those who travel faster. All in all, most motorists have been traveling slower, but there are still some who figure this isn't their war, and it's a blessing they'll have to come down to slow driving like the rest of us.

INFLUENTIAL MEMBERS OF Congress talk of a review of the entire manpower situation before they decide whether to lower the draft age to 18. Some believe an army of 13 million couldn't be supported adequately with men (and woman) power left at home. Meanwhile stalling on 18-19 draft threatens to be a boomerang. Congressmen have wanted to keep the issue out of the November elections and now find that current draft calls are so heavy that Selective Service must start taking married men. Members fear an uproar from the country on this score and figure it may be worse than a draft of the boys would have produced. THE AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION adopted a strongly worded resolution before it adjourned last week at Kansas City, asking Congress to lower the draft age. They also favored post-war compulsory military training of American men for a year, before they reach their 22nd birthday. Some observers of the manpower say that the drafting of the estimated 2,500,000 youths of 18 and 19, won't save married men for long—inasmuch as perhaps more than half of these youths have already enlisted. AFTER THE ELECTIONS WE can look forward to a lot of rationing on foods and commodities. Meat will be cut one-fifth immediately, and a lot of other foods will likely have to be purchased with coupons. We'll find, as time goes on, and the war continues, the we won't be able to live in the same carefree way that has been our custom. ONE CAN STAND ON THE street corners and hear a lot of arguments of when and what the United Nations should do, or should have done. A popular clamor for a second front is the outstanding comment. Modern war is in no sense a game. It involves co-ordinated use of air, water and land forces and necessitates minutely detailed study and comparison of the relative strength of every element of both the attack and the defense. To leave anything to chance or to count on lucky breaks, is to invite disaster. All of us are anxious to have a second front in Europe, of course. But we who speak on the street corners know nothing of what is entailed. Military actions launched to appease political agitations, in disregard of the military realities, are foredoomed to failure.

"WE ARE STILL LOSING THIS war. It will take all that we have to win—what are you going to do about it?" That's the truthful, if inelegant language of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Bard. That is what we need to hear, every one of us—every newspaper, every business man, every labor union, every farmer, every professional man, every housewife, every man and every woman in America. All of us can do more.
