THE COMMON DEFENSE

Religion and Self-Government

One of the very great compliments that has been paid to human beings is that which they are capable of self-government. For self-government of any kind, personal or social presupposes that men and good enough to desire what is good and wise enough to know how to use power. When we say, for instance, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," we are assuming that people are capable of sustained effort in its behalf.

This is asking a lot when you come to think of it because it is asking that people overcome indifference and laziness, that they have a will to carry on even when they are weary, that they endure hardship and criticism when it would be easy to shirk both. Yet, there is no other way to maintain free institutions against decay and the attack of the selfish except by the efforts of the people who are spiritually great enough to bear the burdens and responsibilities of self-government and thus prove themselves worthy of it.

All of this is simply saying what religious people have proclaimed for a long time: that individual responsibility is essential to the development of character and that without the help of God it cannot be achieved or maintained over the long haul and in the time of adversity when it is greatly needed. There is, consequently nothing accidental whatever about the appearance of strong, free, self-government in those countries where people have been taught to trust in God and to shoulder personal responsibility. The principles of religion, spread widely among the people of these countries, taught to them from childhood, and practiced in the affairs of everyday life, have created nations with spiritual power sufficient to the needs of sustaining the serious responsibilities of self-government. This fact cannot be emphasized too strongly today because the great task of today is the preservation of free government and free institutions of all kinds.

People lacking will power, perseverance and fortitude, and unequal therefore to this task, will look for a dictator to take all the responsibilities of government for them. And people who have will power, perseverance and fortitude will be found in the end to be people who look to God, "the author of every good and perfect gift," for the grace to develop these absolutely necessary characteristics and virtues.

Decidedly, free society needs religious people in ever increasing numbers, and everyone who proclaims and teaches this truth in this generation is doing a work of such splendor and magnitude as to outlast anything that this day can produce.

TWIN ROCKS SOLDIER GETS YEAR SENTENCE

Pvt. Francis Mort, Twin Rocks, was sentenced to a year and a day in federal reformatory last Thursday, after pleading guilty in federal court in Pittsburgh to a charge of illegally wearing the uniform of a staff sergeant and impersonating a member of the Army's intelligence service.

City of Johnstown police nabbed Mort last August, while he was absent without leave from Fort Bragg, N. C., after a young woman had complained that Mort had demanded that she turn over to him silver wings given her by her boy friend in the Army. He claimed he was with Army intelligence. Mort also had been sought by county officers for questioning in an auto theft.

YOUR HEALTH

From Educational Committee of Board of Trustees of the Medical Society of Pennsylvania, which Cambria County Medical Society is a component . . .

It is pronounced "skizofreneah" and is spelled schizophrenia.

The word comes from the Greek words meaning "to divide" and "the mind."

Some authorities insist that the term "schizoid" represents a type of mental characteristic more or less present in everybody.

Exaggeration of this divided-mind tendency is said to constitute schizophrenia.

Because schizophrenics are generally not lacking in intelligence, early diagnosis may be difficult.

It is only through early treatment, however, that help may be given this large group of mental patients.

Their thinking processes are confused.

Conduct may be only slightly peculiar.

Emotions are perhaps abnormal, out in the direction of indifference and apathy rather than violence.

Behavior of the schizophrenic may be eccentric but readily explainable.

Schizophrenia is sometimes brought on by an acute, severe illness.

Usually, however, it is a slow mental derangement, unsuspected until some utterly freakish action arouses suspicion.

Shock methods of treatment are proving helpful in many cases.

Unconsciousness and convulsions are produced, either by insulin injections or other convulsion-producing drugs or by the more recently used electric shock given through the skull.

There is definite hope now for the schizophrenic.

Early recognition of the condition is important.

MORE COMMODITIES TO BE RATIONED; AND THE O. P. A. WILL EXPAND

More commodities will be rationed almost as quickly as local ration boards can take on the work. Office of Price Administration officials disclosed in revealing a blue print for vast expansion of the agency headed by Leon Henderson.

Because of the need to be close to every rationed citizen and every price controlled storekeeper, OPA's program calls for establishment of district offices in every city of 100,000 population, of which there are ninety. In addition officials hope to place district offices, with decision making powers, in all communities of 75,000 or more, which would add about 25.

Numerous rationing programs are already in effect—sugar, gasoline, fuel oil, typewriters, automobiles, tires, bicycles and rubber work shoes—but worsening scarcities will make it necessary to add additional ration programs almost as rapidly as local boards can absorb them, officials declare.

New rent offices also will have to be opened, in line with the presidential directive calling for designation of the entire country as a defense rental area.

DO YOU KNOW?

The term "the remains" as applied to the dead human body was first used by a clergyman early in the nineteenth century during the burial service after an autopsy had been performed on the corpse.

Dr. Augustus S. Kech, of Altoona, was named president-elect of the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania at the recent annual meeting of the Society in Pittsburgh.

COAL MONEY
