Ship's Surgeon, His Legs Broken, Sticks to Post

Cares for 50 Wounded for 12 Hours After Sinking of His Vessel.

SOMEWHERE IN SCOTLAND.—Out of the sinking of the Canadian corvette Weyburn has come one of the war's great acts of individual heroism—that of a Royal Navy surgeon lieutenant who disregarded his own broken legs to attend more than 50 injured and wounded seamen for more than 12 hours.

The surgeon lieutenant, whose name cannot be disclosed, was the medical officer on the British destroyer which picked up most of the Weyburn's survivors after the Canadian warship was crippled by an unexplained explosion while on convoy duty in the Mediterranean a few weeks ago.

Both Legs Broken. Both Legs Broken.

The doctor was standing on the destroyer's deck helping the Weyburn survivors from the water and attending the wounded when there was a terrific underwater explosion. Both the doctor's legs were broken below the knee, and he was dazed for a few moments by the shock. But he recovered quickly, refused all efforts to carry him to a cot, called three seamen to help him and went to work.

called three scamen to help him and went to work.

Survivors of the Weyburn, waiting at this base for transportation back to Canada, told how the doctor had the scamen carry him around the destroyer's decks to attend some of the wounded and injured. Then he had them carry him to the destroyer's wardroom, by this time filled with wounded from the Weyburn and men of the destroyer injured in the second explosion.

with wounded from the Weyburn and men of the destroyer injured in the second explosion.

Refused to Give Up.

By each cot the seamen would place him in a sitting position on the floor, where he would make an examination and give orders for treatment to the sick bay attendant. Then the strange procession would move on to the next wounded man.

Only when every examination was made did he permit himself to be placed in a chair with his legs stretched out for what small measure of comfort was possible. But he still refused to stop work.

He sat in the chair for hours until the destroyer reached Gibraltar, directing the treatment of several seriously wounded and burned men. He relaxed only when doctors came aboard to take the wounded to more comfortable quarters.

Even his last job, as the procession of stretchers began to move off the ship, was an official one—to call for another stretcher, this time for himself.

PITTSBURGH.-Magistrate P. J.

PITTSBURGH.—Magistrate P. J. Sullivan lent a sympathetic ear to the tale of Mrs. Roy T. Pifer, charged with a traffic violation.

Mrs. Pifer, it seems, parked her car, put a nickel in the meter and joined a line before a meat market. She needed a roast for Sunday diner. An hour passed. The nickel ran out. But Mrs. Pifer didn't budge.

"The people were like a bunch of wolves and I just had to stay there or lose my chance to get a roast," she lamented.
