TWO MINE WORKERS ARE KILLED AT FALLEN-TIMBER ON THURSDAY

Two miners from Fallentimber were crushed to death about 11 o'clock last Thursday morning when they were caught under a heavy fall of rock in Mine No. 3 of the Cambria Mills Coal Company at Fallentimber. Coroner Patrick McDermott said the men—William Igou, 46, and his buddy, Calvin rye, 33, were killed instantly when caught by the rock fall which was five and one-half inches thick, six feet wide and four feet long.

Both men sustained fractures of the skull and were dead when extricated from the debris.

State Mine Inspector Richard George, Roaring Spring, and Coroner McDermott, in their investigation, learned that the men were working together driving a heading when the roof fell.

The men had just fired a shot and were removing the rock when the large portion of the roof let go. The tragedy was discovered by Charles Jenkins, another miner who had gone to the place where the men were working to return a tool he had borrowed earlier in the day.

Igou is married and is the father of one child.

Frye, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Frye, Blandburg, is unmarried. Besides his parents, he leaves several brothers and sisters.

DOUBLE FEATUE THE GRAND THEATRE NEXT FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Patrons of the Grand Theatre, at Patton will be given a double feature treat on Friday and Saturday of this week, and both pictures are well worth seeing.

Deanna Durbin and Franchot Tone, with Pat O'Brien, are leaders in the roles of "His Butler's Sister," a delightful, and romantic light comedy that is guaranteed to please you. It really is a novel vehicle for all three of these outstanding screen performers, and O'Brien in the role of a butler, presents many laughable incidents. It's a farce for all three of the performers—but what a delightful farce, it is.

The other picture brings another of those Hal Roach army comedies, with William Tracy, in "Fall In." Here is a picture that brings anew other pictures you've seen of him, and his buddies, and his comedy tactics. You'll enjoy this from beginning to end. Don't miss the double feature
