The Telephone Has Served the Farmer Well

For more than half a century, the telephone has cies . . . in more pleasant living.

There was the farmer, for example, who wrote to say that his telephone enabled him to get better prices for

"It gets me to market in a few seconds," he said, "and at the best time."

After the war, when we get the green light on production for civilian needs, telephone service for farms will be even better than before. But until final Victory, farmers, like city folks, must wait. No one would wish it any other way.
