VETERANS TO GET FEDERAL JOBS

Washington.—The Civil Service Commission on Thursday night restricted applicants for federal jobs to veterans, asserting that the government as an employer must set the example in hiring returned servicemen.

Until further notice, federal vacancies will be filled either by veterans or federal employees who have been or are about to be released from their jobs.

The government does not intend to discharge employes from liquidating agencies and at the same time hire other people from the outside to fill other positions in the federal service, the commission declared.

The ban on receiving new applications may be lifted only in instances when vacancies cannot be filled either by veterans or persons involved in reductions of the government force.

The principal points of the Commission's program are as follows:

1. Applications for employment from disabled veterans of World War I and World War II, and from non-disabled veterans of World War II who file within one year of their discharge from active service or from hospitalization, will be received at any time. These veterans will be examined and will be assigned numerical ratings. Their names will then be entered on the Commission's lists of eligibles in such a manner that they will be given the preference to which they are entitled under the Veterans Preference Act of 1944.

2. Except where the needs of the service absolutely require it, no further applications will be received from other persons who are not now a part of the federal service.

3. Where Federal employees are scheduled for discharge, arrangements will be made immediately for representatives of other agencies that are hiring new personnel to interview those who are about to be discharged. Where the appointing offices decide that the persons interviewed meet the qualification standards established by the Civil Service Commission, they will be authorized to hire such employees on the spot without the prior approval of the Commission.

4. When present federal employees are not hired by another
