YOUR HEALTH

From the Medical Society of the State and Cambria County Medical Society

There are two kinds of tumors. The benign tumor is not considered cancerous and is not particularly dangerous to life.

The malignant tumor is invasive, wild, growing and is potentially harmful.

A tumor, according to the dictionary, is a swelling.

Why are malignant tumors so dangerous? One tiny cell, out of all the trillions of cells that make up the body, begins, for some unknown reason, to change its form and substance.

It starts to grow and multiply without end—pushing and crowding all the other well-established, law-abiding cells around it.

The tumor thus begins, grows at the expense of the surrounding flesh, starving, crushing, and displacing, and often poisoning it.

Since this growth of a tumor may occur in any structure of the body, we may have cancer of the lung, liver, bones, brain, skin or muscle, etc.

It is believed that repeated irritation of long standing or contact with certain chemicals seems to precede the change of certain normal cells into cancerous cells.

Men who smoke clay pipes seem to acquire cancer of the lip. Chimney sweeps tend towards cancer of the skin on the legs. Farmers, continuously exposed to the irritation of sun and wind on face and hands, frequently develop cancer of the skin on these parts.

There are but three defined methods of treating cancer—early surgery, X-ray and radium.

There are no other recognized methods of treatment.

Digestion of food begins in the mouth.
