Where'er I roam, I dream of Home

EXCERPT FROM A SOLDIER'S LETTER
... So once again I view the saga of history and places. Beyond a doubt all States hold interest in their history, development and scenery, but I shall never tire of Pennsylvania. It alone embraces variety and romance that no other State can boast.
'I have found, in meeting men from all over the United States, that too few know much about their native States. I have recalled a hundred times the many trips we took as if they were yesterday. When I think of Pennsylvania, I see its very outline in my mind. The part that holds my interest for the moment is not just a name or a city; to me it is a picture, a scene in history, industry, a familiar road or mountain. It is a river or valley with a story that gives it a place in my memory.
'Who from somewhere else can say they saw and know where Marie Antoinette planned to make a home, Asylum! I climb again the steep winding stairs of Ephrata's Cloisters. I stand at night on Mt. Washington and look down at Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle and watch the great steel mills belching fire and smoke. I tour Philadelphia, walk in Independence Square, and touch the Liberty Bell.
'Valley Forge... Gettysburg... Fort Necessity... they made history-books come alive! Oil wells against the sky; coal mines... coal, hard and soft... and learning what goes on to bring it as a life-product to man.
'I think about Big Valley and see the Amish and Mennonite farmer folk with their queer clothes and recall stories of their strange customs.
'Pictures arise—the winding streams that challenge the fisherman; Lake Scranton, still as glass; looking for deer in the twilight woods; sleeping on a mountain top in Cook's Forest and watching the sun dispel the valley fog at day-break; camping in the summertime, picking huckleberries, and seeing teaberry leaves pressed into winter-green oil.
'Who could be as lucky as I... to have been shown what beauty was in my own back yard!... And yet, so many, even from Pennsylvania, don't know these things exist...'

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA
EDWARD MARTIN, Governor FLOYD CHALFANT, Secretary of Commerce
