Prison Board Plans Probe of Co. Jail

A complete probe into the actions of John P. McGowan as warden of Cambria Co. Jail will be made by the county prison board.

Continuation of a hearing on charges of mistreatment of prisoners was ordered by the board Monday after testimony was presented to show McGowan slapped at least one prisoner. The warden did not deny the charge.

On the motion of Commissioner Cyrus D. Davis, the investigation was continued until 2 o'clock Monday in the courthouse. Members of the board said State Police Burgess Domenick Gelotte, Nanty Glo, and others will be called before the nine-man prison board to present testimony.

Monday's preliminary investigation resulted from the statement in open court of Lewis Vasbinder, 20, Portage, who claimed he was struck by Warden McGowan when he was admitted to the county jail.

Constable Paul Madigan, Portage, told members of the board he took Vasbinder to jail March 26. The officer said he was waiting for a receipt for the prisoner's admission when Warden McGowan walked up to Vasbinder and struck him twice.

Warden McGowan declared he slapped the prisoner because Vasbinder would not stand in position to be searched as is the custom for all incoming prisoners. Madigan denied Vasbinder refused to be searched.
