Lehman Instructs Package Senders

When sending a parcel, the name and address of the person to whom it is being sent should appear on one side of the parcel only, according to Postmaster G. A. Lehman of Patton. He says that placing the name and address on more than one side does more harm than good.

It often results in confusion and delay in determining whether postage has been paid. The parcels sometimes are marked "postage due" before the stamps are discovered elsewhere on them.

Furthermore, he stated, when parcels bearing the address on more than one side are sent special delivery, insured or C. O. D., the stamp indicating special service is apt to be overlooked. This results in the parcel's receiving ordinary handling.

Dean Locals

Afflicted People Usually Impaired At An Early Age

Rehabilitation Bureau Assisting Handicapped

An analysis of the types and the ages of handicapped Pennsylvania residents who were rehabilitated during the past two years ending June 30, 1947, indicates that more than half of the disabilities occurred at very early ages, according to a statement by Mark M. Walter, Director of the State Bureau of Rehabilitation.

Because of the large number of disabilities suffered by residents at early ages, Walter pointed out, the importance of referrals from the public schools. He also stressed the fact that directors, or others in authority, at city playgrounds, the scout officials, both for boys and girls, and club members, should refer the cases of handicapped youth 16 years of age or over, as early as possible to the Bureau so that upon entering employment, they would have the advantage of every possible assistance in the highly competitive life of today.

He noted examples where students left high school with employment handicaps, worked as best they could for 10 or 15 or even 20 years, and then upon coming to the attention of the Bureau, were rehabilitated and developed marked increase in their earning capacities. He deplored the fact these cases had not come to the Bureau's attention when the children were in school, at which time they could have been prepared for earning much higher incomes during the years before they came to the Bureau's attention.

The report of the rehabilitation of 735 handicapped Pennsylvania residents in the year ending June 30, 1946, and the approximately 2,000 disabled individuals who will have been rehabilitated by June 30, 1947, indicates that about 38 per cent of the persons had disabilities that originated in childhood, about 46 per cent originated in disease, 11 per cent were congenital, while about five per cent resulted from either military or civilian war service.

Approximately 52 per cent of these rehabilitations were under the age of 20 at the time of disablement, and about 18 per cent were between the ages of 20 and 30. This makes a total of 71 per cent of the group having disabilities that originated before they were 30 years of age, and after having received rehabilitation services, to have many years in which those services would contribute advantageously both to the individual and to society.

Court Will Decide Who Will Be Paid In Reade Twp. Sale

The County Courts will be asked to decide whether or not the county should pay for outside aid in a tax sale, as disclosed by papers filed in the prothonotary's office at Ebensburg.

The case concerns the sale of a property in Reade Twp. formerly assessed in the name of Beacon Coal Co. and sold for taxes July 9, 1946, to Joel A. Troxell for $12,000.

In order to sell the land, the title had to be divested of liens. David Dixon and Chester Kuhn, both of Reade Twp., offered $600 for the property to get proceeds under way and employed Attorney Charles S. Evans, Ebensburg, for legal work. This was done with the understanding that if Dixon and Kuhn did not get the property, they would be compensated by the county for their work.

According to the papers, Atty. Evans was to be paid $150 by Cambria Co. if his client did not get the property. In Aug., 1946, the commissioner approved the payment for Dixon and Kuhn, which amounted to $69.55, including $19.55 for advertising and $50 for services rendered.

The commissioners also approved the bill of Atty. Evans for the sum of $150, but Controller Elmer Davis has refused to pay the bill, and so the case goes to the court for a decision as to whether or not the commissioners had the authority to secure the services of outside help.
