Construction Prices May Force Delays In Road Building

Part of Pennsylvania's $80,000,000 post-war road construction program may be postponed because of high prices. E. L. Schmidt, chief engineer of the State Highways Department, said contract costs are running 70 percent ahead of 1940. The state already has awarded contracts covering $52,000,000 of the program. "But we can't keep it up," Schmidt said. "If prices don't level off, we've got to call a halt."

Construction costs have shown signs of stabilizing, Schmidt noted, but expressed the apprehension that a boost in railroad freight rates would send bids up again. Railroads have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for an immediate 10 percent freight rate increase and an overall boost of 25 percent.

"The majority of materials going into road construction—steel, cement and gravel, for instance—are transported by rail," Schmidt said. "If freight rates are increased, Schmidt said he couldn't see how contract bids could be kept down."

The problem is further complicated, Schmidt explained, by the fact that any postponement in construction leaves roads in such bad shape that more work is necessary to put them in good condition.

Some road improvement plans have been dropped temporarily, Schmidt said, but the large projects are still on the program.
