Patton Woman's Hobby Collecting Statues of Dogs

Friends Bring Souvenirs To Add to Collection (From Johnstown Democrat) A vacation trip to "get away from it all" doesn't always hold true for the friends of Mrs. Hugh Whitford, of Patton, R. D. She may be out of sight, but never out of mind as far as her neighbors and relatives are concerned. Each trip nets another canine statue for her collection which now totals 229. Although she has been a collector for only three years, the Patton hobbyist has dogs of all sizes, shapes and compositions. Her smallest dog is one-fourth of an inch high and the tallest is 10 inches. In length they measure from one-half inch to eight inches. Dogs of metal, bronze, glass, plastic and crockery have made their way into the Whitford collection. At one time the statues were scattered all over the house but lately Mrs. Whitford placed them in two bookshelves. Her first dog—and the one that decided her to make a hobby of collecting canine miniatures—was a souvenir from Gen. Robert E. Lee's headquarters in Gettysburg. It was brought back by her daughters who were on vacation at that time. Her second dog, and also the oldest, came from the home of her mother. The statue, 40 years old, is a replica of the dog used to advertise the old recordings under the name "His Master's Voice." Friends have donated dogs from many of the state's towns and cities and others from Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Illinois and Michigan. Two of the statues came from Canada. One was brought back last summer by honeymooners. Last year for Christmas she got a pair dressed in the traditional garb of the Scottish Highlanders. One is playing a violin while the other strikes a singing pose. Mrs. Whitford has two daughters who are hobbyists. One collects covers from match books and the other centers her interest around advertising blotters.

Miss Jane Holtz Bride on Saturday

At a double ring ceremony at 9 a. m. on Saturday in St. Bernard's Catholic Church, Hastings, Miss Jane Holtz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Holtz, Hastings, became the bride of Paul Paddock, son of Mrs. Mary Paddock of Patton. Rev. Father More Herald, O. S. B., officiated. Given in marriage by her brother, Omer Holtz, the bride was attended by Miss Catherine Paddock, sister of the bridegroom. Fred Holtz, brother of the bride, was best man. The bride's niece Susan Holtz, was ring bearer. Ushers were Joseph Paddock, a brother of the bridegroom, and Don Holtz, cousin of the bride. John McCarty of Ashville was treated recently at the Altoona Hospital for a laceration of the forehead requiring suturing.

Mine Operators Seek Device To Produce a Ton a Minute

Would Compare to Steno's Typewriter The Bituminous coal industry is looking for a machine that will mine a ton of coal a minute and load it on freight cars with one flick of a switch, mining expert Elmer R. Kaiser said at Chicago recently. He said mine operators hope to find a machine that will be to miners what the typewriter was to stenographers. Coal mine owners, up against increased costs, need a production method that will operate more efficiently than a pick wielded by human hands or machinery now in use, Mr. Kaiser said. They hope that improved machinery eventually will reduce costs to consumers as well as to themselves, Mr. Kaiser said. Mr. Kaiser is assistant director of research of Bituminous Coal Research, Inc. The group is an affiliate of the National Coal Assn., an organization of bituminous coal mine operators, which held its annual meeting at Chicago. He said his organization had been asked to provide a device which would permit the adjusting of coal production to demands—a machine which would mine coal and load it, on an eight-hour or 24-hour basis, depending on need. He declined to state what effects such machinery would have on the number of men employed in the mines, except to say: "The waste we want to get rid of is manpower waste. We want to give men machines. "Did typewriters put girls out of work?" The research group has received gifts totalling 80 per cent of its $250,000 goal for the project, Mr. Kaiser said. Contributors include 4 coal companies, 10 coal land companies and four of the railroads. He said he hoped such a machine would be designed within two years.

St. Francis Group Holds Social Event

The Alpha Epsilon Kappa Fraternity held its annual Halloween Social Friday evening, Oct. 31, at the Fraternity House on the Ebensburg Road. The successful social was highlighted by the grand opening of the new, modernly equipped Recreation room. Several young ladies from the Mount Aloysius Academy and Junior College were among the guests of the Fraternity Brothers. Mr. and Mrs. John Powers also were present and took an active part in the festivities. To the enjoyment of all, a comedy skit, "Casey at the Bat," was presented with the unpredictable Danny Sullivan on the vocals, and that "man above men" Larry Glocker as the impossible "Casey." Talented Chuck Koeter accompanied them on the piano. A buffet lunch followed by dancing concluded the evening's entertainment.

Marsteller Folks Get Water Free

Residents of homes in Marsteller owned by Ass. Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Corp. are provided with water free of charge from a 166-foot well drilled by the mining concern. Private residents "get in" on the supply by paying 75 cents a month for one tap and 25 cents for each additional spigot. Until several years ago, Moss-creek residents obtained their water from a dam, but then the timber was cut from the watershed and an additional source was provided by the new well. The water is treated with chlorine gas, then pumped into two 14,000-gal. containers—one on each side of the town. These two containers act as reservoirs. Water is abundant in even the driest seasons of the year. Sam Stover is in charge of the system. He supervises an inspection of the supply about every 60 days. About 150 homes, mostly company-owned, are provided with the service. SMOKING SAID HARMLESS Dr. Bertil van Ahn, Swedish physician who studied 50 human guinea pigs, reports in Stockholm that he found no injurious effects from tobacco smoke on the hearts of any of them. He experimented with 27 habitual smokers and 23 beginners and non-smokers.
