School Health Plan
In Pennsylvania
With school bells once more clanging throughout Pennsylvania, another vital phase of post-war schooling enters its third year.
This is the program of school health examinations, which last year covered more than 850,000 children of school age in the state—and disclosed the fact that approximately 40 per cent suffered remedial defects in rural school districts.
Health authorities point to this figure as the whyfore and need of these health examinations. Interestingly, too, the State Department of Health said only 300,000 students examined last year had ever received a complete physical examination since infancy.
But what happened last year in the rural districts where 242,000 school children were examined? The record shows, a spokesman for the department told the Pennsylvania News Service, that about 46,200 pupils were suffering from diseased tonsils; that 38,800 were found having visual defects, while another 17,850 suffered nutritional defects.
Heart defects were reported in 7,386 cases, while poor hearing was noted in the case of 1,350 pupils.
It costs approximately $3,500,000 a year to carry out these medical examinations. Last year provision was made for follow-up work on defects uncovered—something which had not been provided before. Commented the department spokesman:
"An intensive follow-up and correction of defects found in the school examinations will show results within the next five or even fewer years."

Charges Fraud
In Claims for Health Devices
Washington.—A food and drug administration official declared the other day that unprincipled adventurers in the business of furnishing cure-all therapeutic gadgets are rampant.
"The violations encountered in the (health) device field are of a serious character," Dr. Irvin Kerlan, medical officer, told the American Congress of Physical Medicine.
Although he stressed in a prepared report that most manufacturers are complying with regulations, Kerlan said the persistence of offenders seems to be "directly proportionate to the increasing absurdity of the claims they make for their contraptions."
"Even more tragic," he added, "is the fact that persons turn to these fraudulent pieces of equipment for treatment of serious diseases which require immediate, competent diagnosis and rational treatment by a physician."
Describing a few devices he called fraudulents, Kerlan said:
"A vapor-bath system, consisting of certain non-volatile drugs and plumbing connections between a generator and bath cabinets which could be purchased for $2,200 was represented recklessly as effective for diabetes, abscess of the lungs, decay of the jawbones and blood poisoning, among a list of other ailments."
"A device for administering an enema, priced at $1,190, was offered for the treatment of arthritis, rheumatism, neuritis, high and low blood pressure, toxic heart conditions, ulcers of the stomach, and bowels, colitis, appendicitis, gall bladder troubles, lumbago, and for good measure a host of ills that heretofore have been obscure."

Windber Citizens
Irritated At Term
Called 'Coal Dusted,
Drab, Dirty' in Report
Citizens of Windber, Pa., in neighboring Somerset Co., are irritated by daily newspaper stories which described that town as "bleak, coal dusted, drab and dirty" in referring to the birthplace of Stephana Saja who was married to socialite Francis Hitchcock in Georgia last week.
Andrew P. Sendeck, co-owner of a supermarket in Windber, posted a complaint in his store window along with pictures of the town, along its streets and churches.
"Attention, Mr. Reporter," the document said, "Windber is not a squalid patch. If you wish to know, Windber is in Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania is in the United States, and the United States is in America."
"Sure enough, we are coal miners. Coal mining is an industry in which we are all engaged and thus make our honest living. Such industry is the backbone of America and its people as a nation—in peace and in war."
"In war, we produce coal to defend our constitutional rights for all... in peace, we keep our freedom of press running in an honest and just way."

AAA to Poll Drivers
On Gas Tax Opinion
The Pennsylvania Motor Federation will lay the question of a state gasoline tax raise before the membership of its 60 affiliated AAA clubs.
A total of 300,000 motorists will be polled on the proposed 26-gallon increase for highway improvements. Results of the survey will determine the federation's stand on the issue.
Highway secretary Ray Smock warned motorists that an increase of at least 2¢ is necessary to complete the commonwealth's broad improvement program. The present state tax is 4¢ a gallon.
R. B. Maxwell, executive secretary of the federation, said the federation can choose one of these three alternatives on the gasoline tax question:
It can approve or reject the 2¢ proposal, or it can support a 1¢ increase.
