

Microfilm to Bring to Public Vivid Picture State History

Documents, Letters, Maps to Be Included

Great yawning gaps in the frontier history of Pennsylvania are being bridged these days by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission's research experts, in a concerted effort to make the Keystone State's depository of historical source material one of the finest in the nation.

Already in the possession of invaluable original research material whose significance extends far beyond the boundaries of the Commonwealth, the State Commission is now utilizing the most modern technological aids to collect, at Harrisburg, every official document and document with even the slightest bearing on any of the complex categories of the state's history.

Only a few years ago, the task would have been impossible. Even today, the serious student of Colonial and post-Revolutionary Pennsylvania must travel vast distances to the primeval forest—over entire chapters of the weekly and daily files of many venerable Pennsylvania newspapers. For in these are to be found the best and often the only information of the impact of historic events on the social life of a people.

But the beginning of the work is concerned with bringing light into the darkness that lies—impenetrable as the primeval forest—over entire chapters of the Pennsylvania story.

The various manuscript and map collections already studied and edited for valuable Pennsylvania material, to be reproduced on microfilm, include the William L. Clements library of the University of Michigan, one of the nation's major depositories of historical source papers.

Arrangements have been made for facsimile reproduction of nearly 7,000 items from the correspondence of Lieutenant General Thos. Gage, Commander in Chief of the British North American Establishment from November, 1765 to April, 1775; significant items from the papers of Sir Henry Clinton's British headquarters in North America, 1778-1782, and a wealth of material from the public and private correspondence of Brigadier General Josiah Harmar, the Commander of the United States Army in Ohio and Western Pennsylvania from 1785 to 1791, and Adjutant General of Pennsylvania from 1792 to 1799.

One way is to marry some one from a bright family.

Also, parents who keep a child healthy and happy, mold his interests intelligently, and provide the highest school education obtainable, are building towards his mental superiority.

Some mothers adopt a special plan, just for pregnancy, to produce a brainy child by deep resting and heavy thinking, for the time being.

This temporary program will not affect the offspring, but will possibly benefit the mother.

Does it help to teach a child his letters and how to count before he starts to school?

Early instruction of this kind neither helps or harms; and in school at ten years of age, he will be able to figure and read, regardless of pre-school teachings.

Do games improve a child's brain?

Games and toys do not add to brain power, although they stimulate a feeling for sociability and cooperativeness.

Will playing with superior children improve a child's brain?

Playmates influence a child's general tendencies, but not particularly his mind.

Parents cannot force brains into a child—the best they can do is to keep him healthy and happy—and set him a splendid example.

Hands Are Vital To Your Livelihood

Take Care of Cuts, Scratches Immediately

The hand is the handiest part of the human body. A complicated mechanical structure, it consists of twenty-seven bones in fingers, palm and wrist.

We are familiar with our own hands and so accustomed to the pattern of the normal hand that when we grasp a hand with even the slightest alteration or peculiarity, we immediately detect it.

The hands are vastly important for earning one's living. Due to its exposed and active position, the hand is especially liable to injury.

Any injury or infection following injury often causes serious disability.

Certain slight or superficial injuries, such as hangnails and cracks in the skin, may often be entrance for infections.

An injured hand should be immediately treated by a skilled physician.

Regardless of the repair work to be done on the injured hand, thorough cleansing at the earliest possible moment is important.

After the cleansing of the wound comes the removal of all foreign matter such as grease, soil or splinters.

Testing the function of the parts below the site of the injury will indicate to the physician what has happened to the hand.

He will thus ascertain what damage there has been to nerve, muscle, and tendon.

His work will be to restore the hand to its functional best.

Guest Towels, Dust Cloths Among Uses

impregnated with a fine silver polish for those quick silver polishing jobs you like to do occasionally. You simply wet the sinner piece, rub it with one of these papers, rinse and dry.

Washable Wallpaper: Truly washable wallpaper that has a thin, practically invisible coating of plastic which resists dirt, grease, water and practically any other stain you can think of. The finish is not shiny and will not crack or peel.

Face Cloths: Sheets of soft strong paper impregnated with a mild soap are wonderful for a quick clean-up at the office before an evening engagement. They're a comfort when traveling, too—always available in purchased packages.

For Storing Silverware: This is a chemically treated tissue paper which when used to wrap silver or other tarnishable metals for storage will protect them from tarnish. The box contains sheets in four different sizes to fit all your silver storing needs.

Shelf and Table Coverings: Extremely strong plastic coated paper which resists heat and staining. Only care needed is wiping it off with a damp cloth. It's pliable, so it won't crack. You can even sew it. Use it for shelf and table coverings, curtains and for lampshades.

How Can Parents Have Bright Child?

Parents worry about their child's I. Q., meaning intelligent quotient.

2,000 Stores Under Western Auto Sign

The two thousandth home-owned store to bear the Western Auto name has just opened in Harrison, N. Y. On hand to congratulate for establishing a numerical milestone in Western Auto history is Samuel Boxer, president of the Harrison Chamber of Commerce. Western Auto Supply Co., which started as a mail order house in Kansas City, Mo., in 1909, instituted the private store ownership plan in 1935. The company does not control the locally owned stores but serves only in a wholesale capacity. In addition to the 2,000 home-owned associate stores there are 263 company owned stores in the rapidly growing Western Auto system. The Barnesboro store, established Nov. 1, 1936, is owned by Jack Galinis of Barnesboro.

Why Your Limbs Will 'Go to Sleep'

A person may arise from sitting in one position and find that his leg has gone to sleep.

Not exactly has it gone to sleep—but it feels like it.

Numbness or loss of sensation in a limb, with inability to move it for a short time, is caused by a pressure on a main trunk supplying the limb.

The weight on an arm or leg against a support such as the arm of a chair is some part of the body, or a cramped position of the limbs, may exert enough pressure to block a nerve.

The nerve fibers gradually become unable to conduct impulses and the blood supply to the nerve at that point is cut off.

First there is a loss of sensation, then some inability to move the limb.

Discomfort arouses the person and the pressure is released when he moves about.

As the numbness disappears, a marked tingling pervades the limb, which is described as feeling like pins and needles.

Numbness that occurs several times during the night may be due to a repeatedly cramped position of the body in sleep.

Sitting with the legs crossed for long periods often brings on numbness.

Almost everyone has had such an experience at some time or other, and there is no special significance in it.

There are, on the other hand, some forms of diseases of the blood vessels which bring on similar condition.

These are due, usually, to a disease process in the walls of the blood vessels, or in the nerves.

CEGAR CHEST STILL ROMANTIC

While a modern bride never thinks of her "hope chest" as a dowry in the old time sense of the word, nevertheless the cedar chest has a romantic significance, since it holds her household linens and finery for use in the new home.

Chests made of cedar are almost impervious to decay and because their natural oils act as deterrents against insects and especially the destructive moth, they provide a safe place for fine wools, furs and other materials that need protection. Not only brides, therefore, enjoy cedar chests, for women everywhere are finding that they are not only safe protectors but that their exterior furniture finish harmonizes with other furnishings.

Some chests are designed in Colonial style, with the exterior of maple; others imitate old Colonial log-houses with high cabriole or outwardly curving legs and with fronts that simulate drawers of the usual dresser.

English and French 18th century styles are also represented in today's models, and contemporary styles carry out the smooth, streamlined effect of modern design.

Store Sound Vegetables

Only well matured and sound pumpkins and squashes should be placed in winter storage, says J. O. Dutt, extension vegetable specialist of the Pennsylvania State College. They keep best under warm, fairly dry conditions, 42 to 55 degrees temperature and 70 to 70 per cent relative humidity, with good circulation of air.

Hang on, despite everything, and you'll get there quicker.
