Emeigh Boy Lost In Elk Co. Woods

Follows Wrong Pipeline On Returning to Car
Fourteen-year-old Robert Prosky of Emeigh is happy to be home again after being lost overnight in a dense wilderness in Elk Co.
He became separated from his stepfather, Andrew Zuder, about 4:30 p. m. Monday at Big Mill Creek, west of Ridgeway, and spent a lonely night in the woods before he was found about 3 a. m. Tuesday by C. M. Buffington, a hunter from Harmony, who took the lad to his camp for the rest of the night.
State Police, game wardens and hunters had searched the woods all night for the boy, who said he became lost when he gave up hunting and decided to return to the car. He was using a pipeline in the woods as a guide. Prosky said he must have followed the wrong pipeline and became confused. When darkness fell and he knew he wouldn't be found until morning, the boy said he built a fire to keep warm.
The game warden took the boy back into the woods, where his stepfather and other hunters were still searching. The lad declared he doesn't intend to give up deer hunting.

November Draft Quota Completed

630 Pennsylvania Men Get Uniform Last Week
Pennsylvania's first manpower contribution under the post-war conscription law joined army ranks last week.
Last Friday night the state's initial quota of 630 men was filled.
Each member of the group was given 21 days to get his affairs in order before reporting for service last week at the nine induction centers in the state.
The 998 Pennsylvanians comprising the December quota will don uniforms during the first 20 days of the month so there will be no inductions within the period between Christmas and New Year.
The January quota is 1,370. Six men are being called for pre-induction physical examinations for every one inducted thus far. A number of those called were kept out of the last war by physical and occupational deferments.
Col. Henry H. Gross, state draft director, said a large percentage of men with World War II physical deferments remained ineligible.

COFFEY REQUESTS 1 COMMITTEE CHOICE
Robert L. Coffey, congressman-elect from the 26th Pennsylvania District (Cambria, Indiana and Armstrong Cos.) has requested that he be given a berth on the Armed Forces or Foreign Affairs Committee in the 81st Congress.
Mr. Coffey has expressed strong interest in an appointment to the Armed Services Committee. He made it known soon after his election that he feels his background of military service equips him for a place on this committee. He is long-term veteran of the Army Air Force, and when he that branch of service last April he held the rank of lieutenant colonel.
Where foreign affairs are concerned, he can point to having served as military attaché to the U. S. Embassy in Santiago, Chile. He is keenly interested in and concerned with Latin American relations.
