Who's Kidding Who?

We don't like to hold a postmortem on an issue that's over, but a public statement made by State Republican Chairman M. Harvey Taylor on the way the election went in Pennsylvania gets under our skin a little bit. Said Taylor: "The Democratic leadership paid sorry lip service to the bonus measure and did nothing visible or tangible to help put it over."

Just to keep the record straight, Mr. Taylor, the credit for the passing of the "adjusted compensation" Amendment I-A belongs mainly to the two chief veterans organizations in this great commonwealth. Democrats and Republicans alike supported the proposal, and in this section of the state, at least, nearly every voting precinct had veterans themselves at the doors soliciting votes for the proposal on a non-partisan basis.

And perhaps it was just a coincidence, but it seemed a funny thing to us that nearly every Republican-controlled daily newspaper in the state came out against the bonus three days before the election. Included among these were the Pittsburgh Press, Philadelphia Inquirer, and the Johnstown Democrat and Tribune. Most of the editors of these papers got orders from "higher up." And we know that big industry doesn't supply almost unlimited amounts of money to the Democrats—you ought to know who gets it, Mr. Taylor.

Gov. Duff came up with his thought on the matter, too. He said that "no one gets something for nothing," which is true. But at least two responsible officials—Congressman VanZandt of Blair County and former State Treasurer Ramsey S. Black are of the belief that the bonus can be paid out of present state surpluses. Opponents of the amendment proposed all sorts of taxes to pay the bonus, and every one of them, from a sales tax on up, would be levied against the people. What they didn't tell was that in the event new taxes are necessary, if a corporation tax that was knocked off the books during the administration of Gov. Arthur H. James was made law again, it would more than take care of the bond payments and interest each year.

Cause for Alarm

Reading the dope of the political writers in the Sunday newspapers, both the national and state Republican leaders are "whistling in the dark" in their statements that the election of last week meant nothing. In fact, there is every portent that they have plenty of reason to worry both in the Congressional elections of next year and in loss of the state administration in Pennsylvania. The close race for superior court was a surprise for both parties, and had the Democrats gotten out their vote in the smaller Republican counties, they might have won the judgeship.

In Philadelphia, where the biggest upset election resulted, Richardson Dilworth, elected city treasurer and carrying the Democratic ticket with him, now is causing a concerted thought among the Democrats that it may be "Dilworth for Governor." The Republicans have much to worry about.

Coffee Worries

For some time back we've been reading in the newspapers that the price of coffee will be going up and up, until it may reach a peak of one dollar a pound around about the first of the year. Frankly, we were worried about the bleak outlook, because, among other vices, we do like perhaps more coffee than is good for the health. But there's a ray of hope in later news dispatches. Now we read that coffee importers say that we can stop worrying about the one dollar price, and that current myths of shortage and panic prices were born when recent reports indicated that in 1950 there may not be a surplus of green coffee beans. Fact is, however, that the year's coffee imports to the U. S. will exceed all previous records.

We are constantly becoming more and more of a coffee-drinking nation, and the number of two-cup drinkers at a meal is on the increase. May it be well for a lot of us if it were to become a luxury drink. To some degree we are immersed in a habit that's hard to realize, but we surely are helping the economy of the coffee-producing countries. One thing about coffee is that the capacity of one's stomach curtails the consumption after about two cups. The Mormons have coffee on the banned list. But we'll keep on drinking it until it becomes too expensive.

Easy Bonus Victory

Amendment I-A voted on at the election last week could hardly be called an "issue" judging by the results of the balloting, not only in Patton and Cambria County, but all over the state. The amendment was overwhelmingly favored. Oddly enough, the one amendment that wasn't even discussed out loud was the one that was beaten rather soundly. It was No. 2-A, which would exempt slum clearances from taxation. However, few people knew what it was about.

It is common fact that amendments to the constitution have a hard battle when the reach the ballot stage, for the simple reason that, unless it is some widely-publicized affair such as the bonus measure, people will not go to the trouble to really find out just what the proposed amendment contains, or whether it suits their opinion or not. The result is that there have been many good amendments voted down simply because the voter usually feels safe in either not voting at all, or in voting opposition to it.

Modest Heroes

Recently there was the story of the bakery truck driver who pulled a three-year-old girl out of the river at Easton, turned the little tot over to competent authorities and then went calmly about his business. The truck driver didn't even leave his name. He didn't call the newspapers for stories of his feat. In fact, after the rescue, it seems he scamped from the area as fast as he could. However the deed did not go by unnoticed. Somebody called the baking company, related the incident, and the driver's name was learned.

Something on the same order happened last summer when three Hellwood boys who were camping along the Juniata took over attempts to save a drowning man's life by means of artificial respiration after others had given up hope. They succeeded. And they, too, promptly forgot about the affair—such heroes. They didn't ask for laurels—but they got them anyway. Their deeds, credited with saving lives, should be the creed each of us could follow. Let's take time out to think of the other person.

The heart-warming aspect of all this is the fact that even today when each of us are so intent on considering almost exclusively our own individual welfare—there are those among our fellow humans who take time to think of the other person. The deeds of this man and the three boys have proven them such heroes. They didn't ask for laurels—but they got them anyway. Their deeds, credited with saving lives, should be the creed each of us could follow. Let's take time out to think of the other person.

Some Men Must Look Funny

The public has been forced to realize that humans must look like groundhogs, for again this past summer several Pennsylvanians were shot because they reportedly resembled these animals. A couple of the accidents were in this area. But recently it became clear to us why a man sometimes is called "an old duck." A hunter in the northeastern section of the state was shot "in mistake for a duck."

Bakerton Fence Busters Lose 20-6 Game Sunday On McIntyre Gridiron
The course of all good teams, overconfidence and over-enthusiasm, that has eluded the Bakerton Fence Busters in team football season, finally caught up with them last Sunday. Traveling to McIntyre for their final C. & I. League game of this season, the local forces were confident of coming home with a victory. Instead, the tables were turned and McIntyre, a much kicked around team all season rose to the occasion and thrilled their hometown rooters by copping their final home game, dumping the Fence Busters to the tune of 20-6.

McIntyre started off fast as Liscas made the first score in the opening period on a 10-yard run. The pass for the extra point was good. McIntyre scored again in the second quarter, but did not Setlock scored in the second period on a 65-yard jaunt and again in the final chapter on 32-yard run. Bakerton rallied in the final chapter for the score as Setlock hit paydirt from 7 yards out.

Even though the locals suffered their second defeat this season, Lane and Teklinsky of the losers showed fine form in the defensive play, both making impossible tackles and nice blocking. The locals showed great spirit and a will to win, but did not recover from the surprise of a supposedly much weaker team taking the play away from them.

The C. & I. League officially closed last Sunday with Revlon taking the championship. The Fence Busters this season have a record of 6 wins, 2 defeats and a tie. They downed, Hellwood, 13-6; Carrollton, 14-0; Easton, 14-0; Ernest 2-0, in a forfeit due to fact that Cresson failed to appear at their own field to play. The locals took 3 passes heaves and McIntyre did not make any of 4 Bakerton had 11 fumbles to the winner's one. A post-season game will be played with Cresson this Sunday at 2 p. m. in Bakerton.
