Is Our World Getting Better?

Sometimes one wonders whether or not, with all the inventions and short-cuts to comfort and convenience that have been realized SURGICAL ADMITTED during the past half-century, they really have been conductive to the betterment of the spiritual lives of a lot of the people. Back at the D. Kenneth King, Westover, Don Rose Marie Matteotti, Emeigh: Orothy Briggs and Doris, LeRoy Mr. and Mrs. Luther Troxell turn of the century there weren't as many opportunities for temptation because commonplace facilities of today were not known. When one is in public life around a county courthouse the thought that mankind isn't benefitting too well spiritually comes with some force. The weekly pleaders before the courts, the quarterly trial lists of cases and the offenses committed, in many instances seem to stem somewhat from the background afforded by our modern life, but likely a half century ago the world wasn't too much better, with all the inconveniences.

However, juvenile delinquency without question is a gigantic problem today, compared with the past. Hair-raising radio programs, he-man movies, and now television, with the so-called crime playlets, R despite the fact they are presumed to indicate that "crime doesn't pay." The juvenile courts of Cambria County, and likely of most all counties, are busy. Seemingly they become busier with each time Barnicle, Carrolltown.

Children of today are worldly wise-at least a number of them are. The thirteen and fourteen-year-old boy and girl likely knows more about like than many did at a marriageable age years ago. Unfortunately, the juvenile courts prove that this isn't too healthy a condition. The knowledge acquired doesn't come from the right source. The teaching of the penalties of indiscretion is absent. The irresponsibility of many parents, too, is one of the greatest contributing factors.

Where we once had the horse and buggy days, today hundreds of automobiles line every street in both metropolitan and small-town America. Behind many of the cases that reach the courts here in Cambria County and over the nation, will be found somewhere in the accessory to the escapade, an automobile. Kids used to brag about jumping freight trains maybe now it's stealing a car. Probably, later on, even the airplane will be contributing to crime who

Of course, there isn't anyone who would want to go back to the horse and buggy days. No one would want the discomforts of yesteryear. The inventions and conveniences really should have no bearing on the delinquency of any child. The parental and guiding spirit of a youngster from infancy is the only answer to the problem. But the cause of delinquency in many cases can be traced to the parentts themselves, who don't seem to be able to cope with the decent thoughts of their responsibility of home

Back over the years the average parents seldom even knew of "night-life," of abandoning their children for hours several nights a week, of thinking of their own pleasures and enjoyments to the neglect of the proper training of their families. But everyone has his own life to live, and while for many, curcumstances are such that no wrong is done; for others such is not the case. Divorce, broken homes and irresponsible parents are given as reasons for a great portion of child delinquency that exists in our country today.

In the world getting better? We doubt it. Pernaps it isn't getting any worse. Just as we have always had uncalled for wars down through the ages, just as mankind has always been foolish, so also we have the same follies at the grass roots of our so-called civilization, the keystone of all good living—the home. Even God-fearing, conscientious parents are not always free from the crosses they bear because of wayward children—but these parents are not the rule, they are the exception when it comes to the delinquency of children.

It's A Mighty Good Law

Have any of you folks who have been driving cars over many years not at sometime or other been sideswiped by some old jalopy, with an irresponsible driver, and found that despite the fact that the accident wasn't your fault, you had to pay for the damage done to your car? What should have been law long ago at least has been realized. Any clashing and banging around you may hear from now on with automobiles as the colliding forces must be fully covered by insurance under new Pennsylvania state regulations, for since February 1 the "automobile responsibility law" has been in effect.

There are a lot of insurance agents here in the north of Cambria County who probably have done a land-office business over the past few weeks in selling policies to likely hundreds of motorists who never before bothered to insure either themselves or the liability they honestly owed their neighbor in case of an accident. The new regulations have teeth that bite. To the irresponsible driver, to the chap who has nothing to offer except ownership of the jalopy he drives, the factor of losing his driver's license is sufficient to make him toe the line.

Pennsylvania's new law moves into action immediately following an accident. There's no delay. The law will be a great safety factor as well, for more autoists will pay stricter attention to driving rather than get into all the additional "troubles" as imposed by law. Best of all, the frequent reckless driver who is often involved in accidents will have more worries, for his insurance will be much higher in cost. If you have a car and don't carry insurance, you had better attend to the matter at once—or stay off the highways.

Many Turned Down

A lot of folks residing in Pennsylvania failed to receive some "help" along financial lines that they requested last year. In fact, $4,000 persons or about 41 percent of all applicants for relief were refused public assistance. The reason is simple enough, for upon investigation they were found to have resources or income sufficient to meet minimum needs. The state Department of Public Assistance lid help 140,000 persons, however, more than half being granted lid-age assistance.

There is an irony in the public assistance law that some-means unfair, but there likely is no way, of avoiding it. here in Patton, or anywhere else for that matter, families have never had a saving habit, who hastily squandered all sir funds on pay-day, and who never had ownership of the because of their own irresponsibility, now, having ig, are on relief rolls with no obligation to the government.

On the other hand, the frugal householder, the family man who brough saving and effort, finally managed to acquire a home, fully said for, can get relief only when he mortgages his home to the mount of the relief extended. This has been a penalty on good itizenship and has been the cause of many deservedly and proud it folks being in actual want, without seeking aid.

What Will Be the Typical Home

What will be the typical American home built this year? A lot of people have a lot of ideas on the subject, but the Pennsylvania Resiturs Association declares that the 1950 typical home will be a bungalow ranging in price from $8,000 to $10,000. There will be no dining room and kitchens will be smaller—somehow. In one city out of every three it will be a ranch house type, while in one out of every five cities it will be a Cape Cod or Colonial.

size of the lot? It will be larger than during pre-war at least this seems to be trend. The porch will be found on in the front, while in large cities it will be preferred on where the entrance will be placed on new homes.
