

Farming One Of Most Hazardous Trades Shows Accident Statistics

Farmers live dangerously. And farming is one of the most hazardous of trades.

One-fourth of the total accidental deaths in the United States occur on farms—more than four thousand of them.

The farmer is subject also to occupational diseases. Animals communicate their diseases to the farmer. Skin afflictions are common among farmers.

New chemicals used in seed treatment, in fertilization and as fungicides and pesticides add dangers to farming.

Sanitation, housing, nutrition and personal hygiene on the farm are said to be below the city average. Falls, burns and accidents with livestock and unguarded machinery have put the farmer in the dangerous trades class.

Farmers fall from barns, silos and trees and suffer broken bones and internal injuries. Fire, an ever present danger on the farm, is the cause of many deaths.

Protruding nails on lumber left lying about trip not only the farmer and his wife, but the playing children.

It is the machinery on farms that causes most accidents and deaths.

Tractors roll over and pin the operator under their heavy weight. Belts whirling on farm machinery catch the unwary. Carelessness on the farm results in injury and death.

On the credit side, farming does have some definite health benefits—outdoor life and the independence associated with self-employment.

19 Students Graduate At St. Francis College

Nineteen area residents were included in the class of 25 young men who were graduated Thursday of last week from St. Francis College, Loreto.

The third annual summer commencement exercises were held in Doyle Hall on the campus.

In the commencement address, Rev. Father Adrian J. M. Veigel, college president, said some of the graduates had entered school in wartime and were graduating into a world which once again apparently is on the brink of war.

Dilworth Says Aid Should Be Allocated To Needy Schools

Says Tax-Anything Law Merely Sham Device

BY RICHARDSON DILWORTH

Distressed school districts will get little comfort out of Governor Duff's recent comment in a national magazine that his "tax anything" law is his idea of good government.

The legislature, very properly, gave a mandate to increase teacher salaries a total of $60,000,000. Governor Duff refused to provide more than $24,000,000 of that in State funds, telling the school districts to raise the other $36,000,000 themselves by taxing anything the state wasn't already taxing.

Under this theory, the State Government can run up all the bills it wants, and throw local governments into bankruptcy by compelling them to provide the money. The school crisis which led to this high-handed maneuver focused attention upon a major fact: The Republican leadership in this State, to protect its large campaign contributors from the burdens it can upon local governments. Since real estate is the chief source of local revenue, this burdens the little home owner for the benefit of the big fellow.

The battle cry of "more local responsibility" in school financing, as in relief, care of the mentally ill, and many other things, is a sham device to conceal a shirking of the State Government's responsibility.

Under the constitution it is the State's job to provide equal educational opportunity for all children. The time has now come when we must devise a real public education program, particularly for distressed districts.

Registration furnishes DP's with a valuable means of identification. Boal pointed out. The registration card is one of the quickest and most reliable forms of identification in contacts with government officials, employers and many public and private agencies.

The Selective Service Act permits exemption of aliens upon formal application, but persons applying for such exemption are thereafter barred from citizenship. Experiences thus far with DP's indicate there will be few if any who will avail themselves of this provision, Boal said.

Restoration Of Brandywine Battle Area Is Undertaken This Spring

(By Pennsylvania News Service)
Harrisburg—The tidy sum of $67,000 has been earmarked by the General State Authority for the complete restoration of Gen. George Washington's headquarters at the Battle of Brandywine in the American Revolutionary War.

The restoration was requested by the Brandywine Battlefield Commission which administers the 55-acre tract on which the headquarters of the Continental Army under Washington's command was located.

The ancient stone structure was destroyed by fire some years ago and only parts of the walls are standing today.

The headquarters building was located on U. S. Route 1 about a mile from Chad's Ford in Chester County. The commission now is restoring another building which is known as Lafayette's Headquarters in the same conflict.

Washington's army, outnumbered by the British Army under Sir William Howe, was forced back toward Philadelphia after a hard battle on Sept. 11, 1777. It was one of the most important battles of the American Revolution fought on Pennsylvania soil.

The house used as Washington's headquarters was a tavern owned by Benjamin Ring at the time of the battle. It was one of the earliest farmhouses constructed in provincial times and long was a noted landmark in the district. The restored headquarters will be used as a museum.

The increase in Cambria County property sales continued last month to climb to 25 percent above the dollar-volume of 1949. July sales passed the $1 million mark for the third straight month.

The 1950 spurt represents the first extended increase in real estate market activity since 1946. After that banner year when the sales totaled approximately $25 million, the sales volume declined for three straight years before beginning its upward last January.

Last month sales amounted to $1,256,000, according to deeds filed at the courthouse with Recorder Clark Powell. This is the second highest monthly total since July of 1948. In the two year period it was exceeded only in June of this year when the combined purchase prices were $1,294,000.

The July total boosts the total sales for the year to $8,060,000—a figure which wasn't reached until early October last year. The $8 million figure is 25 percent above the $6 million total for the first seven months of 1949.

In all 2,813 deeds have been filed with Recorder Powell this year. Of these, 1,051 were transfers of convenience that did not involve cash.

Willkie Kin To Wed
Richard Todhunter, Sr., of Barnesboro, president of Barnes and Tucker Coal Company, passed another milestone on Tuesday. He was 74.

No special celebration marked the occasion other than a family dinner at the home.

The coal operator, still active and in good health, has been affiliated with the mining industry for 62 years. He took his first job in the coal fields as a lad of 12 years.

Step by step he advanced in the business until now he heads one of the largest bituminous firms in Northern Cambria Co.

Mr. Todhunter was born in England, Aug. 8, 1876, but came to America with his parents in 1880. He settled in Barnesboro in 1905—his home for the past 45 years.

Young Nanty-Glo Miner Dies Of Heart Attack

A 25-year-old Nanty Glo miner suffered a fatal heart attack while at work Tuesday night in Springfield Coal Corp.'s No. 4 mine in Spangler. The victim was David R. Davidson, a dust loader for the firm. Joseph Govekar, Cambria County Coroner, said death was caused by a heart attack. Davidson was working with Samuel Greenaway, Spangler, when he suffered the attack. Dennis Keenan, mine inspector, also conducted an investigation.
