Faculty Party Held Wednesday At PHS

A decorated Home Economics Room, a lunch, carol singing and a motion picture, all added up to a fine Christmas Party of the Faculty last Wednesday evening in the Patton High School.

Attending the event were the members of the faculty, their husbands or wives, and retired faculty members.

This was one of the four programs scheduled for the 1950-51 school year. The first faculty party was a winter roast held in October at Sylvan Park, near Carrolltown. Parties will also be held in February and April.

Mrs. Agnes Gauntner's Condition Improving

Slight improvement is noted in the condition of Mrs. Agnes Gauntner of 511 Fifth Ave., who was badly burned on Dec. 9 when her clothing caught fire in her apartment.

Mrs. Gauntner's apron ignited when it touched the hot griddle of an electric stove as she was removing a pan.

For the present she is staying with her sister, Mrs. Harry Owens of Mellon Ave.

CLASS TIME CHANGED

The Industrial Arts and Typing Classes will be held on Thursdays instead of Mondays at 7 p. m.

SHORT STORY

Tricky Darlings

By Richard H. Wilkinson

JOHN Carlton would never go so far as to say his daughter, Jane, was stubborn. He chose to call it an independent spirit, a desire to lead her own life, make her own way in the world.

Actually Jane was a duplicate of old John in character and disposition. Old John recognized the resemblance.

Knowing Jane as he did, and loving her as he did, gave Old John a decided advantage. He knew what methods to employ when he wanted her to do something.

Jane was beautiful. She attracted men, lots of them.

Old John frowned on Jane's reckless regard for love. He frowned on the young men who paid her court. All but one, it seemed to him, were worthless.

The one, Phil Scot by name, a son of Old John's closest friend, appeared to possess the requisites of a good husband. In the first place he had a job. Secondly, he worked hard and had ambition to do big things. Thirdly, his attentions toward Jane were honorable and sincere.

Old John was too wise to suggest to Jane that she consider Phil Scot as a possible husband. Despite the fact that he knew that Jane did not regard Phil with disdain, he knew, also, that the moment she became aware of her father's prejudice poor Phil wouldn't stand a chance.

"Look here, Jane," he said one day. "I notice you've been seeing that young Scot fellow a good deal lately. I absolutely wouldn't stand for his type as a son-in-law."

Jane's surprise gave way to anger. "Phil Scot," she said defiantly, "is a darling. Of all the boys I know Phil stands head and shoulders above the rest. And," she added, "you'd better like it because he's the man I'm going to marry."

Old John scowled. "He'll never be a son-in-law of mine. So you'd better begin forgetting him now."

AN hour later Albert J. Scot, young Phil's father, completed a telephone conversation with his oldest and closest friend, John Carlton, and summoned his son.

"Phil," he began, frowning deeply. "It seems to me you've been paying a good deal of attention to that Carlton girl lately. I want it stopped! Understand! She's nothing but a flirt and a social butterfly."

Phil was aghast. "But, Dad, she's the daughter of your oldest friend! I thought... that is... well, you see I like Jane a lot. I was in hopes..."

"Well, cease hoping," Scot senior cut in.

A WEEK LATER Old John and Albert Scot were sipping drinks and exchanging congenialities on the veranda of the former's home. A car stopped out front and two young people came up the walk.

Jane was beautiful. She attracted men, lots of them. She was, in fact, a bit reckless about it all, and refused flatly to take the matter seriously.

The two young people stopped and smiled pleasantly.

Jane Carlton said: "I'm sorry to disappoint you, father, but John and I are married. We love each other, and, despite the fact that neither you nor Mr. Scot approves of the match, we're going to live our lives as we see fit."

"And," said Phil Scot defiantly, "if you don't like it, you can hump it."

Old John and Albert T. Scot exchanged glances. They laughed. They stopped each other on the back and roared with delight.

Jane and Phil looked on in bewilderment. After awhile Old John wiped his eyes and explained the conspiracy the pair had concocted.

Jane looked at Phil and Phil looked at Jane and Jane said: "How clever. You won't mind, then, when we tell you we've been married for two months? We've kept it secret till Phil got a raise in pay. He got it today and tomorrow we're leaving on our honeymoon. You two can sit here and think up ways and means of running our lives when we get back."

St. Benedict

Mr. and Mrs. John Emerick Jr. and daughter, Patty, motored to Baltimore, Md., Sunday, where they visited at the John Hopkins Hospital.

John and Jim Emerick, students at St. Vincent's College, arrived home last Friday for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Verlo Berringer and daughter, Pat, and Phyllis Ahlstrom, visited in Johnstown last Saturday.

Mrs. Leo Berringer entertained the members of her club last Thursday evening. First prize was given to Mrs. Clyde Bradford and second prize to Mrs. Bernard Swanson. Attending included Mrs. Bernard Swanson, Mrs. Clyde Bradford, Mrs. Benny Bilko, Mrs. Jake Bilko, Mrs. John Emerick, Mrs. Wm. White and Mrs. Leo Berringer.

Residents of St. Benedict extend their sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Pat Malloy and family in the recent death of their son and brother, Jack.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Glova and family visited in Johnstown on Sunday at the Lizzio home.

The annual Christmas entertainment by the local Presbyterian Sunday School will be presented in the church on Sunday evening at 7:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Mansel and George and Cherry Tree, spent the week end here at the George Miller home.

SEEDS AVAILABLE
Total supplies of most farm seeds are exceptionally large, say Penn State College economists. The 1950 production of sweet clover seed is the largest in 11 years. Production of timothy seed is 60 percent higher than a year ago. Cover crop seed output is 2 1/2 times as large as last year.

Merry Christmas to All!

Peace on Earth...

For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

John 3-16

Glory to Him - Hope of mankind - Exemplar of all we hold true and beautiful. Let us seek for His wisdom and guidance as the Wise Men did. Let us vow to continue His good works and strive to follow His way to inner happiness.

To everyone, everywhere, we offer the wish that the spirit of Christmas be with you this year and for many years to come.

MAIN ST. GARAGE
CARROLLTOWN

Somehow, this year, the greatest Christmas message of all is the one that comes most often to our mind. We say it sincerely, fervently, to all our customers, to our friends, to all mankind,
