Telephone Discourtesy—Tragedy

They live in every community, on every rural route, everywhere of the wires stretch. They are, and have been for years, a bone of contention and sometimes even a real menace to their neighbors, and no fault because we believe that the sum of sometimes even a real menace to their neighbors, and no fault because we believe that the particularly to husiness people throughout the business hours the phone companies or the general public can do seems to remedy the matter.

Because of a long conversation on a telephone line in the Ashville district last week, a home burned to the ground—because the occupants of the ill-fated building could not warn the Ashville Fire Co. in time. Even though the lady who was endeavoring to transmit the alarm desperately advised the offenders of her plight, they paid no heed. Surely there must be guilt in the consciences of a couple of people whom we'll likely never know.

Perhaps the folks who subscribe to telephone service feel they have every right to utilize the service afforded just as they please and just as long as they please. Mayise they do. But the real service of a telephone should be given all and not monopolized by a few. Everyone who has a telephone and reads this column well knows that many times they have had urgent calls, and couldn't reach their party for lengthy periods because of telephone "visitors."

This article won't help the situation, we know. Nothing will iterate the practices of the selfish minority who cause so ch inconvenience, sometimes even of a tragic nature, to the at majority who do recognize that the telephone should be ized for the convenience of all. If you must "visit" on the phone, make those visits reasonably short. Give your fellow phone subscriber a chance. Do unto others as you would have a do unto you.

Looks Like A Good Program

The state legislature has a new public health program to consider. It's a unique sort of program. It does not call for large increases in the spending of public funds. In fact, any increases in cost will be small and may be offset in time by savings in the effectiveness of the program. It does not call for centralization of more power over public health in Harrisburg. In fact, it seeks to do just the opposite—to set up home rule county health units. It does not call for more bureaus in the State Department of Health. Instead, it seeks to consolidate 21 scattering bureaus into four more efficient administrative units.

In these respects, at least, the health program departs from dition in such a surprising degree that the proposals should net attention of all citizens. It was at least two years in the king and follows a top-to-bottom survey of the State Health American Public Health Council, which in represents 30 medical, health, nervice and civic organization. The bills would mark out 50 health districts in the state authorize formation of county health boards. State subsidies and perhaps federal grants—would be available to these boards a matching basis.

Qualification for the jobs would be the test in hiring of health workers instead of political sponsorship. More health workers would be transferred out of Harrisburg to the field. Encouragement would be given establishment of local health centers, which may qualify for federal sid. The sim of it all is better health for the individuals who make up the population of Permsylvania, and it can be spelled out in terms of tupe realests, cancer, venereal disease and protection from epidemics.

Our Beauty Compares With Best

Spring time is now on in full blast in the Allegheny Mountains of Pennsylvania, and here in Northern Cambria County we are located in the best the season has to offer. Trees are fully leafed, follage is in bloom, and the scenery compares well with any of the top-bracket offerings anywhere in this great nation of ours, with all of the bally-hoo of advertising that so many other scenici states

Most every resident of Northern Cambria County who has traveled a lot and who has seen the so-called "wonder" scenery of so many other states of the union, and even abroad, will tell you that we have just as good, and much better, to offer along that line than most others. In fact, it takes a lot of travel to really appreciate what we do have. We are all prone to take things for granted.
