

Transportation Of Students $234,000-Per-Year Business

Strict Rules Laid Down For Bus Drivers, Kids

The transportation of the public school children in Cambria County is a $234,000-a-year business, according to a statement from the county branch of the Pennsylvania State Education Assn. issued in conjunction with American Education Week.

A major aim of the observance is informing the public on the accomplishments and needs of the public school system.

The general annual transportation cost is the amount expended by 37 of the county's 56 school districts to haul more than 14,000 children to and from schools each day. About 125 buses are used for the job.

Transporting the public school children is a job that is regulated extensively by state law, the educational association points out.

The buses must conform to the standards for pupil transportation approved by the State Council of Education and to provisions of the laws of the state.

Operators must be thoroughly reliable and of good moral character, able-bodied, free from communicable diseases, and have normal use of both hands, feet, eyes and ears, and be not less than 21 nor more than 70 years old.

They must refrain from the use of profane or indecent language, abstain from use of intoxicating liquors on days when operating the bus, abstain from use of tobacco while transporting pupils, be responsible for maintaining the proper discipline on the bus, and be capable of making necessary emergency repairs.

Specific Rules for Pupils Also
There are specific rules for the pupils, too.

They are taken on and discharged from the bus only at designated stops and at the extreme right of the road. No pupil is permitted to get on or off the bus while it is in motion. In discharging passengers, the driver must see that each pupil crossing the highway at that point is safely across before starting the bus. Children must pass in front of the bus to cross the road.

Motorists also must be guided by school bus regulations. A law enacted in 1949 by the Assembly requires that all traffic in both directions stop when the bus is stopped, except in cases where a bus is loading or unloading in a loading zone off the highway.

Traffic should stop at least 10 feet behind and in front of the bus and remain there until the bus resumes motion or the operator signals motorists to proceed.

Regulations regarding who is to be transported in the buses also are explicit; the educators point out.

According to the rules, no person other than a public school pupil, public school teacher or other public school official is permitted to ride in the bus without the consent of the school board. Nor is the vehicle to be used for any other purpose than transport.
