

Bill of Rights Topic Of Prothonotary At Kiwanis Meeting

Ladies' Night Planned This Thursday At 6

Members of Northern Cambria Kiwanis Club listened to an eloquent and highly informative address as Prothonotary Joseph C. Dolan spoke to them last Thursday evening in their weekly meeting. The subject of the discussion was "The American Bill of Rights."

After explaining briefly the duties of his office, the speaker proceeded to a discussion of the announced subject. "The Bill of Rights must be discussed in a relative light," Mr. Dolan said. "Do we need to worry about our Bill of Rights? Does anything threaten them? Some think that there is a threat. Hitler threatened. Now Stalin threatens."

At this point the speaker discussed at some length the history and policy of Communism and concluded his remarks by saying: "Today Russia controls over 1,000,000 people or one-third of the population of the world. They want to destroy America more than anything else in the world. We should think of some ways to combat Communism. There should be more study of what the American Bill of Rights have to do with us." The speaker was introduced by Rev. Flummer Harvey, chairman of the committee on public affairs.

The meeting this Thursday evening, Dec. 20, will take the form of the annual Christmas Party and Ladies' Night. The committee in charge is H. H. Nehrig of Patton and Fred E. Buck and Hugh Cunningham of Carrollton. The party will be held in Central Hotel, Carrollton, with dinner at 6:15 p. m.

New Coventry Monument Honors Lady Godiva

Lady Godiva is on her horse again. This time Coventry's medieval heroine is of bronze, and her mount is the bronze steed of the statue recently unveiled by the wife of the U. S. ambassador to Britain. The new monument in Coventry is an indication that this ancient English city, now gradually rebuilding its war-shattered homes, churches, and factories, has not forgotten its past.

In practical terms, this past is the story of steadily developing industries which have made Coventry one of England's economic leaders. To the world at large, however, the name stands for three other things:

It is a symbol of sacrifice by a modest woman who rode naked through the streets to ransom the people from cruel taxation.

There are skeptics who say that Lady Godiva's ride is a myth, and that the myth was merely romanticized by Tennyson's famous poem.

Whatever the exact facts, in the history-plus-legend of the event, it is recorded that Lady Godiva was the wife of Leofric, powerful 11th-century Earl of Mercia.

The earliest narrative of the famous ride was written by a 15th century author, based on stories growing out of the incident. According to this account, Leofric, in jest or anger at his wife's continued protests against the heavy taxes levied on Coventry's near-starving people, agreed to lift the burden if she would ride unclothed through the marketplace. At the end of her ordeal, the story goes, Leofric kept his promise.

Later a postscript legend was added, to the effect that only one of all the townspeople broke the pledge not to look during the ride. For his lapse, this "Peeping Tom" was stricken with blindness.

Poultry Disease Viruses Survive Sub-Zero Cold

Poultry growers who rely on very dry or freezing weather to kill off disease germs in their flocks may be in for a long, long wait.

New evidence that the popular "dry and cold" theory of disease control does not apply to deadly virus infections of poultry has been furnished.

Viruses responsible for common poultry diseases—including fowl pox, bronchitis, and laryngotracheitis—were frozen, dried by laboratory methods, and then stored in the dry state at temperatures constantly below zero. The stored viruses were tested at intervals on poultry to see if they would produce infection.

It took almost two years for the weakest virus to lose its infection-producing power, veterinary scientists reported, while some of the other viruses remained infective for nearly ten years. Similar research has shown that the virus which causes Newcastle disease is likewise highly resistant to freezing temperatures. Living viruses capable of causing Newcastle disease have been found in the bone marrow and muscle of poultry carcasses chilled or frozen for as long as six months.

Early Days of Street Car

New York pioneered tracked vehicles with Broadway horse-cars in 1827. London waited until 1861. The first electric traction line of any extent is credited to Richmond, Virginia, in 1888. Streetcars really pushed forward from 1892 to 1917, while the motor vehicle was still an infant. Trolley excursions had popular, traction companies had plain and fancy cars that could be chartered, and built amusement parks as goals of excursion runs. Baltimore's black-adorned funeral car, Dolores, did a brisk business for years, since the city's ceremonies were mostly along the trolley lines.

Center of Learning

An educational and literary center from early times, Edinburgh, Scotland, was already well launched on its golden age of learning when the New Town was built at the end of the 18th century. Associated with the city, among the gifted company that included Scott and Stevenson, are such notables as the fiery 18th-century reformer, John Knox; philosopher David Hume; economist Adam Smith; biographer Boswell; J. M. Barrie, novelist and playwright; and Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone. Present-day Edinburgh has a population approaching the half million mark.
