Orders Conferred On Large Number At Loretto Rites

Very nearly 152 years to the day of the celebration of the first Mass in the 44x25-foot log cabin church of the parent parish of the Diocese of Altoona, the first Catholic parish from west bank of the Susquehanna River to St. Louis, Mo., the Most Rev. Richard T. Gullfoyle, D.D., bishop of Altoona, last Friday evening and Saturday morning enacted another history-making ceremony in the present cathedral-like edifice of the Loretto parish when he conferred the clerical tonsure and all the holy orders, except priesthood, on the largest class of seminarians of St. Francis Seminary, Loretto, ever to receive the sacred orders at one scheduled ordination ceremony.

At midnight on Christmas, Eve, 1799, the Rev. Demetrius A. Galitzin, prince priest of the Alleghenies and founder of Loretto, celebrated the first Mass in the first church of St. Michael parish, a white pine log structure without pews or kneeling benches.

Bishop Gullfoyle conferred the tonsure Friday evening, and the orders of porter, lector, exorcist, acolyte, subdiaconate and deacon during a Mass at 8 a. m. on Saturday morning.

Assisting the bishop were Very Rev. Thomas Madden, Ph.D., the chancellor of the Altoona Diocese, as archdeacon; Very Rev. John P. M. Doyle, TOR, STM, Ph.D., Litt. D., rector of the Loretto seminary, and Rev. Clement White, TOR, and Camillus Kleuber, TOR.

Rev. Charles Diamond, administrator of St. Michael's, was host to the church dignitaries and the ordination class at a breakfast in the parish hall following the ordination Mass.

Recontrol of Rent Possible In Towns

Any community or state can recontrol just as it decontrolled rents.

So states Leo H. Akers, director of the Johnstown rent office. "Every community, town, city and county in a state can bring in rent control by resolution of its local governing body, under the two-way street of the local option provision," says Mr. Akers. "Under the old law, decontrol action meant a state or locality never could bring back rent control no matter how bad its housing shortage might become. Now, Congress has given status and local governing bodies the authority to bring back rent control when it is needed."

The law says that any incorporated city, town or village—or that matter any state—which declares that there is a shortage of rental housing accommodations, may come back under federal rent control," Mr. Akers concluded.

New Western Link Stretches 'Pike' Across Pennsylvania

All 327 Miles Thrown Open On Wednesday

Final completion of the 67-mile Western Extension, latest link of the Pennsylvania Turnpike System, stretches the famous superhighway across the Commonwealth nearly border to border.

The opening of this important artery at 7 a. m. Wednesday of this week made available for public use 327 miles of four-lane divided highway, without any traffic lights and with no crossroad intersections, extending all the way from the outskirts of Philadelphia to the Ohio line.

The Western Extension, which carries traffic around Pittsburgh, runs from Irwin in a northerly direction, just south of Pleasant Valley, then northwest from Murrysville to the Westmoreland-Allegheny County line, through Harmarville and on to a point near Petersburg, Ohio, on the Pennsylvania-Ohio border.

This latest addition to the big toll road was constructed in 26 months at a cost of $77,500,000—more than a million dollars a mile.

Six Interchanges On Section

The six interchanges, which lead to some of the state's best-known communities and industrial centers, are (1) Gateway, near the Ohio border; (2) Beaver Valley, connecting with Route 18; (3) Perry Highway, connecting with U. S. Route 19; (4) Butler Valley, connecting with Route 8; (5) Allegheny Valley, connecting with Route 28, and (6) Pittsburgh, connecting with U. S. 22.

The four service station-restaurants on the new link carry the names of Zelienople, Butler, Oakmont and Pleasant Valley. The service stations are operated by Gulf Oil Corp., which has built a portion of the attractive stone buildings to Howard Johnson for restaurant facilities.

Two major structures on the extension span the Beaver and Allegheny Rivers and three viaducts cross Willow Run and Plum Creek in Allegheny County and Brush Creek in Westmoreland County.

Since there will be much clean-up activity along the right-of-way during the winter months, the commission has decided that the regular turnpike speeds of the section between the Conoco and the Pittsburgh interchange (U. S. Route 22) will be reduced to a maximum of 50 miles per hour for passenger vehicles, including buses, and 45 miles for all other vehicles. These temporary speed regulations will be strictly enforced.

Motorists traveling the full 327-mile length of the Turnpike System—Valley Forge to the Ohio border—will pay a toll of $3.25, approximately 1¢ a mile. The other fare schedules on the Turnpike vary according to the distance traveled and the type of vehicle, ranging from motorcycle to heavy truck with full trailer.

Value Fully Demonstrated
The tremendous value of the Pennsylvania Turnpike has been convincingly demonstrated in its 11 years of operation.

Today it is firmly established beyond question as the finest and safest all-weather highway in the world. Not only does it provide the best transportation available anywhere in the United States, but it is also a factor of the highest importance in national defense because of its potential value as a military highway.

From a financial point of view the Turnpike has been a gigantic success. The most optimistic estimates of the engineers are being exceeded.

Revenue from 30 million Turnpike users since 1940 totals almost $53 million. During recent months, the Turnpike experienced its heaviest traffic. Last August, for example, 334,409 motorists, truckers and bus operators paid more than 1½ million dollars in revenue.

The biggest revenue-producing day in the history of the system was Saturday, Sept. 1, of this year, when the turnpikes clicked to the tune of $70,777.67.

The success of the Pennsylvania Turnpike can be measured not only financially, but by the fact that it has established a toll-road construction pattern being followed in other states, including New York, New Jersey and Ohio.

Burns Are Serious, Can Cause Death

Loss Of Plasma Chief Cause Of Great Danger

Major burns, if untreated, can cause death in from 2 to 24 hours. Burns of sufficient depth and extent as to cause changes in the normal circulation, are major burns.

Burn shock is insidious, progressive and cumulative. Treatment for burn shock must be instituted as soon as possible if the victim's life is to be saved.

This treatment is aimed toward replacement of the plasma lost from the circulation.

The bandaging of a burn checks but does not entirely prevent the progressive loss of plasma, which may reach one-third to one-half of the total blood volume in 24 hours, in untreated patients.

Major burns always cause an abnormal decrease in the amount of protein in the blood and the most rapid method of improving this condition is with the transfusion of whole blood.

Ordinarily, major burns do not involve the gastrointestinal tract and consequently a high protein, high caloric diet can be used to prevent loss in weight and furnish sufficient vitamins for healing.

Infection frequently develops in major burns and suitable doses of sulfonamides and antibiotics are to be promptly administered.

Burn shock is due to a siphoning out of the liquid portion of blood, the plasma, which reduces the total blood volume.

This condition has been called "burn shock" because the patient's blood pressure falls and the patient becomes unconscious.
