Check Jars
Before starting to can, check jars for cracks and nicks to be sure each jar will seal. Have jars clean and ready for the season. Louise Hamilton, Penn State extension nutritionist, suggests that jar covers and self-sealing lids be checked, too.

Advise Insurance
If you have not increased the amount of fire and other hazard insurance on your home within the last three years, you may not be adequately protected at present prices. Saana Black, Penn State extension home management specialist, reports.

Feeds Independent
Help the pre-schooler feel more independent at mealtime. Give him a straight-handled spoon with a wide bowl and a short-handled fork that's small enough for him to manage. A small table and chair for eating, drawing, or painting is good investment. Marguerite L. Duval, Penn State extension family life specialist, believes.

Chicken Barbecue
Summer is chicken barbecue time. Here are a few pointers. Keep the fire very low so the chickens won't scorch or cook too quickly. Constant attention is needed while the birds are cooking. Marjorie J. Wormick, Penn State extension nutritionist, states.

Measure Efficiency
Beef cattle efficiency can be measured, reminds Thomas King, Penn State extension livestock specialist. Most factors having economic value are inherited. These include rate and economy of gain, milking ability, regular breeding, length of life, finishing quality, and temperament.
