'Bia Shot' Blast

THE LARGEST atomic device of the 1955 test series exploded at Yuccs Flat, Nev., with a flash seen in San Francisco, 500 miles away. The blast left its trademark, a mushroom cloud that turned rose in color and climbed rapidly into the pre-dawn darkness. The scientists at the control tower and some 575 military men had to evacuate the test area ten minutes after the blast because of a predicted fall-out from the lower part, or stem, of the atomic cloud.
