Two Sides to Riding Free

Lately there seem to have been a large number of hitch-hikers in this section, and some of them, we notice, are having a hard time and a long wait before some motorist picks them up...

Without question there are few motorists who wouldn't gladly give a friend or acquaintance a lift, and few of them pass up people they actually know.

The motorist has still another matter to carefully consider when he stops and gives anyone a ride or when he invites friends to ride with him...

Then there's also the nuisance of the numerous hitch-hikers who are going nowhere in particular, and are just out for a "free" ride.

However, if something happens to one of these transients by way of an auto mishap, their good parents, with the assistance of some legal adviser, will shortly be after the car owner and insist that he pay for what has been done to their child.

The sum and substance of the whole matter is that the majority of hitch-hikers constitute a menace to the motoring public.

Maybe you are a hitch-hiker. Maybe you are unable to get to one or another point without using this method.

Of course in this discourse there's no intent to discourage the innocent hitch-hikers, such as children who may be seeking transportation to a swimming pool, or who may be going to or from school, or may be on any manner of errands or trips.

Some Observations

This summer has been a season for picnics. Of course most every summer features these events, but there just seemed to be so many more of them this season.

Next week, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the State Association of County Commissioners, Solicitors and Chief Clerks will hold its annual convention at Reading.

Newspapers and magazines have for many moons now been conjecturing on next year's Presidential picture, and guessing whether or not President Eisenhower will again be a candidate.

All politics aside, the Republicans did a pretty good job in the maintenance of the state highways in this area, and the policy of this newspaper always was to praise them for it.

Many of our readers during the winter months have had keen and interesting pleasure in seeing and listening to Roman Catholic Bishop Fulton J. Sheen on television and look forward to his return to the TV-waves again this autumn.

We often wonder whether other professions and businesses have the same constant, everlasting deadlines to meet, as does the newspaper profession and staffs.

"As I See It"

By . . . STATE SENATOR JOHN J. HALUSKA

Last week in our column we pointed out very specifically the chaos that exists amongst medical men in our country when it comes down to making a diagnosis of most any disease.

The AMA disagrees with the decision of the lords of the AMA made when it comes down to accepting a treatment and cure for cancer.

The powers-to-be within this great monopoly keep on telling the world that they have a so-called approved method of curing cancer, and through their mouthpiece, Dr. Charles Cameron, of the American Cancer Society, they are in position to reach newspapers, cheap magazines, and other forms of advertising.

The AMA insists on telling the public that radical surgery, deep therapy, and radium are the approved methods of treating cancer sufferers, and yet when you pin them down and ask them definitely whether or not they will give you assurance that they have cured only one case by these methods, they squirm like a spider and are found to be very evasive.

On the other hand, when those of us who are associated with the Hoxsey treatment point out very specifically the names and addresses of people who have responded successfully to the Hoxsey treatment, the AMA in its usual manner states: "Well, if Hoxsey cured them, they never had cancer."

We have pointed out definitely throughout these columns that it is our personal and most sincere belief that the only way that cancer can be successfully treated is not by cutting and burning people but by attacking the blood stream which is known as the chemo-therapy method.

Well, the smart boys just gave us a "ha ha" and through their great powers they influenced the agents of the Pure Food & Drug Administration to pull a gagsape raid on the Hoxsey Clinic in Portage, Pa., hoping, of course, that we would turn the key and close this institution immediately after the seizure. This we failed to do.

Then shortly thereafter the big boys bounced in again, and the newspapers, radio and TV worked hand in hand with this great monopoly spreading the news that the Hoxsey Cancer Clinic was once again raided and was no longer in existence.

However, knowing full well that we are on the right side of this battle, we continued to fight this powerful group of dollar snatchers, and the fact remains that the Hoxsey Clinic never was closed for one moment following the seizure of the clinic.

Nevertheless, now after 25 years of fooling the public with so-called approved methods that are employed by the AMA, lo and behold, finally at last, the truth comes to the surface.

The New York Times dated Wednesday, Aug. 17, 1955, carried a story with the following headline: "Cancer Evidence Cited—30 Patients Said to Prove That Chemical Control Is Possible" and the column went on to state that 30 cancer patients were presented "yesterday" as proof that the disease can be controlled with chemical treatment.

This all had taken place at the Beth David Hospital, 161 E. 90th St., Brooklyn, New York, under the auspices of the Institute of Applied Biology. The statement read that these 30 patients were between the ages of 8 and 70 and through the chemo-therapy method responded favorably to the treatment.

But, certainly, there's no dearth of places of worship in Florence, and just across the street from the Cathedral is the Baptistery of St. John. Here, too, war damage was evident.

According to tradition, underlying this temple in the ancient times were the remains of a Pagan temple.

Next on our itinerary, we crossed the Arno River to the 600-room Pitti Palace. All bridges but one across the Arno had been bombed during the war.

The Pitti Palace is one that is visited by most all tourists to Florence. From a monumental standpoint this is the most imposing palace in the city.

Here were displayed the famous paintings of The Masters. The inner courtyard, an example of rustic architecture, was made by Ammannati; it was to be a forerunner to the famous Boboli gardens.

Our tour on the morning of April 15th, first took us to the Cathedral of S. Maria del Fiore (Cathedral of the Flowers), which is the Cathedral of Florence.

The interior of the church provides one of the most stupendous examples of Gothic architecture in Tuscany, and contains work of art and monuments of the highest quality.

But, certainly, there's no dearth of places of worship in Florence, and just across the street from the Cathedral is the Baptistery of St. John.

Dr. Emanuel Revic, scientific director of the institute, made the announcement and Dr. Revic said research on this concept now had reached a stage that warranted a much wider application.

So there, my friends, is the truth now coming to the surface, and outstanding medical men are beginning to tell the world that the chemo-therapy method is the only answer to cope with cancer.

Our readers will be shocked in the weeks to come to learn more of this great conspiracy that has been going on to control the world.

So, if you analyze last week's story and add thereto this week's comment, with more to follow, the conclusion is we have a long time ago that not all doctors are bad men but that some bad men are doctors.

Here were displayed the famous paintings of Raphael, Rubens and other masters. Here artists were copying from the originals.

Humor is a necessary part of our lives but many persons overdo it and in many instances cause embarrassment and misery.

When we are cruel and abuse dumb animals, we merely go down to their level.

God created Nature and the great outdoors for man's pleasure and use, so why not enjoy it?

The evil you do may live after you but the good lives eternally. Good advice is not always acceptable and many persons are allergic to it, therefore it should always be given judiciously.

Why not get acquainted with the gentleness and beauty of Night and the Stars—if really it is worth while.

We inherit evil impulses as well as good ones but God gave us a free will and intellect so we make our own decisions.

The Garden of Paradise is proof that the earth was created for goodness and beauty but the devil had other plans.
