The remains of the old government buildings in Washington were visited by a Chinaman, who stopped at the state house and observed the engravings of the monuments. He was then taken to the State House and the building was examined by the Chinaman, who was told that the buildings would be destroyed. The Chinaman then left the State House and was never seen again.

THE JOKERS' BUDGET.

Funds and Plans by Very Mini Men of the Press.

A correspondent for a Chicago paper recently received a letter from a man in the city of Chicago, who said that he was a newspaperman and wanted to know how to get a job. He had worked for several years at the Chicago Tribune, and was now looking for a new position. The correspondent advised him to apply to the editor of the Chicago Tribune, and to offer to write articles on current events. The correspondent also advised him to try the Chicago Daily News, and to apply to the editor of that paper. The correspondent then sent the man his address, and told him to write him when he heard from the papers.
