ACCIDENTS AND INCIDENTS OF EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Funny Episodes and Thrilling Adventures Which Show that Truth is Stranger than Fiction.

NEVER get to talking about snakes without thinking of a trick a big fellow and I once played on some neighboring young men of about our own age, says a resident of Stranton, Penn. "They had built a weir to catch eels in, and one night my friend and I went there to rob them of the catch. The other fellow worked in a bag, and was on horseback close by waiting to take the bag of stolen goods and dash off at a neck speed, he to go across lots on foot. He brought the jaws and the finest set of teeth I ever saw, and after he had poked in the water while he spoke low to me and said: 'Al, I've got hold of the biggest eel I ever handled, and he's wound himself around my arm. He's a whopper, and I can't get him loose. I'm going to bite his head off.' And he did bite it off with one snap. I got home all right with the bagful, and when he joined me we dumped the eels on the barn floor and turned the light from the lantern on the heap. The enormous eel proved to be a great slug-like black-back water snake. There was nothing poisonous about it, and it was as clean and harmless as an eel, but he turned pale as quick as he saw it, and for half an hour his imagination had complete control of his stomach."

THE Cape Town Argus prints the following story of the funeral of a native African King: From Old Calabar comes the account of the way in which the king's grave was prepared for the reception of his body. The hole was a large one and deep. Lying in the same grave were nine of the king's youngest wives, and their deaths had been brought about in the most cruel manner. Each of the poor creatures had both her wrists and ankles broken, and she was made to walk on gravel. In that state, and suffering the most cruel pain, the unfortunate creatures were placed at the bottom of the grave, seven of them lying side by side. The body of the king was then laid on them in a transverse direction. The two remaining wives were placed on the side of the king, lying exactly like the monarch's body. No food or water was given to the poor creatures, who were left in that position to die. It is said that death did not, as a rule, take place for four or five days. Four men were stationed round the grave, armed with clubs, ready to knock any of these wretched women who were not satisfied with their position, and to put them to death if they were found to be tampering with their maimed condition, were able to crawl to the side of the grave.

ONE of the most remarkable and exciting experiences ever recorded in connection with the settlement of the Northern Wisconsin wilderness is recorded from Unity, a small station on the Wisconsin Central Railway. A woodman named Kleiner, together with two small children—a boy and a girl—went into the woods a short distance from the station, Kleiner, as is customary with settlers, taking along with him his Winchester rifle. He had become somewhat separated from the children, when he saw a large black bear, and he was so startled by hearing a little boy screaming at the top of his voice, and upon running to the spot, was horrified to find that a large black bear had suddenly dashed from the dense thicket near which the children were picking berries, and catching up the little girl, was making off with her through the woods at a rapid rate. The screams of his child, who was in the clutches of the bear, moved Kleiner to immediate action, and grasping his rifle he hurriedly followed through the woods in the direction from which the screams proceeded. Owing to the denseness of the forest he could see neither the child nor bear, and was nearly blinded by the screaming of the child. After he had proceeded about twenty rods he suddenly came upon the bear, who was standing upon his haunches in a little opening with the child struggling and screaming at his feet. The bear showed fight and made ready to pounce upon Kleiner, when he brought his trusty Winchester into use and fired, shooting the bear through the head and killing him instantly. Beyond being scratched by the bear's claws and her clothing torn to shreds, the little girl was unharmed.

A DISCOVERY, referring to the iron age, has been made at Gioppen, on the coast of Norway. A burial chamber, twelve feet in length, and formed of stone slabs, had been discovered. Containing the remains of a man. The find in the chamber includes a bucket, ornamented with bronze, made of lime wood, two lanceheads of iron twelve inches long, a double edged sword in scabbard, with a ferrule of bronze, an iron shield, a bronze buckle, some Roman gold coins, perforated with worn ornaments, a pair of bronze scales, some iron arrowheads, and a pair of shears in a wooden case. On the body lay two large red stones and some bronze ornaments, having, no doubt, formed part of a belt, with some beads of iron and glass, used to indicate that the body rested upon a bear's skin. The most remarkable part of the find is, however, that the lining of the coat around the neck was in a perfect state of preservation, and revealed rich embroidery of images of animals, an object which has never before been discovered in ancient graves, and which has given Norwegian archaeologists much food for speculation.

WHILE plowing near Pleasant Hill, Ill., recently, writes a correspondent, A. B. Isgel, a farmer, noticed three of his dogs in a hole, and looking into the hole a short distance away. A great dust was raised, and for some distance the grass and weeds had been smothered or trod down. Isgel hurried to the spot, and to his horror found the dogs engaged in a terrible fight with a monster snake. The dogs had been fighting for half an hour or longer, and the snake, before Isgel arrived, had the largest of the dogs, a huge cur, got the snake by the back of the head and held on until it lay quiet. When satisfied that the monster was dead, Isgel approached and was struck with awe by the enormity of the reptile. He took the body to town, where it was viewed by hundreds. By actual measurement the snake measured 13 feet 7 inches in length, 5 feet from the head it was 2 inches in circumference. This immense reptile has often been seen in the bottoms by fishermen, but all efforts to capture it have proved unavailing. Some people declare the snake recently seen at from a painting time museum at Clarksville, Mo.

L. H. BIRROTT and John Murray, of New Lisbon, O., brought to that place from Carrollton a monster rattlesnake. Examination of natural histories fails to show any record of his equal in size, the greatest length allowed his species being from seven to eight feet. This one is over nine feet. He is fifteen inches in circumference and has twelve rattles at present, some having been broken off. He is a diamond rattler, a species confined to the Atlantic coast from Florida to North Carolina and the largest of all rattlers. The snake was captured in Florida by two negroes, who make a business of killing them for their hides. On account of his great size they took this alive. They performed the rather delicate operation of passing a trap over a hole in the sand into which they lured him, and after a turtle. He was shipped North as a present to Bird Kriper, of Carrollton, who soon found himself with the biggest kind of a white elephant on his hands.

A PARTY is being organized in Oregon to search for the famous Lost Cabin, which is supposed to contain 1,000 ounces of gold, gathered many years ago. A party of miners years ago, it is said, discovered wonderfully rich diggings somewhere on the Cascade Mountains and took out 1,000 ounces of the metal. One night they were surprised by hostile Indians, and all but two were murdered. The survivors finally found their way into the settlement of the Willamette valley nearly dead from wounds and hunger. Their story gained considerable belief, and they organized party after party to search for the lost cabin, all of which ended in disaster and suffering. At this late day an old-timer turns up with the maps of these men who died years ago, and will pilot a party into the country that is believed to contain the richest diggings in the world.

A MAN having been seen with a wheelbarrow in Mount Feake Cemetery, Wat-tah, Mass., in the night recently, an investigation was made, which led to the discovery that a dog had been buried in the lot of H. K. Hall, a Boston merchant. Mr. Hall admitted that the animal had been buried by his order, at the request of his wife. He claimed that he had a right to do so. The trustees of the cemetery referred to the City Solicitor, whose opinion in substance was that no person has a right under the form of deed issued to bury any dumb animal in a lot, that such burials can be legally restrained from, and an injunction served on them. At the meeting of the Board Mr. Hall was ordered to remove the remains of the dog.

MR. C. R. WINTERWOOD, of Martinsville, Ill., has had quite a remarkable experience with a turtle. In 1874 he caught a small turtle, and, just for amusement, cut the figures representing that year on the under shell of the reptile, and then let it loose. He forgot all about the circumstance until five years later, when he again captured the terrapin. The mark was yet plainly to be seen. He freshened it up and then cut his initials, "C. R. W.," beneath it, after which he again turned it loose. Recently, again found the turtle, now fifty yards from where it was the other two times, and it did not seem to be a particle larger. The marks are still quite plain.

THE Emperor of Morocco is soon to receive from London two handsome carriages of Oriental design. A handsome cab of green and gold, to be led by mules, is one of them. The other is a palanquin to be carried by mules. The seat is so arranged that the Emperor can sit cross-legged if he wishes, or on a chair if he prefers. One of the most suggestive features of the vehicle is a little cupboard on the right side containing a four-chambered revolver and ammunition. On the other side is a sword and other weapons, also writing materials. Has the Emperor heard that the pen is mightier than the sword?

THE heads of the Danish police have introduced a way of suppressing intemperance at a rapid rate. The screams of his child, who was in the clutches of the bear, moved Kleiner to immediate action, and grasping his rifle he hurriedly followed through the woods in the direction from which the screams proceeded. Owing to the denseness of the forest he could see neither the child nor bear, and was nearly blinded by the screaming of the child. CARL DUNDER.

He Encounters Several Sharpers and Comes Out Ahead.

"Well," queried Sergt. Bendall as Carl Dunder entered the police station the other day with his hat worn jauntily on his ear.

"No, I had some fellows come around to see me again, and I was busy," "Swindled again, I presume," "Sergeant," said Mr. Dunder, as he flushed clear back to his ears. "Maybe I was some haystacks, and maybe I know enough to take care of myself. I wasn't so smart as a policeman, but I can come in when she rains."

"Well, perhaps. What were the fellows after?" "My wife she likes to go to Lansing," replied Mr. Dunder, after getting over his mad a little, "and I goes by der depot to buy a ticket."

"How mooch vhas dot ticket to Lansing?" "Two-forty," "No less for cash?" "No, sir," "I gif you two-twenty," "No, sir," "Two-twenty five," "No, sir," "Den I goes by dot way of Shackson, and you don't get a cent."

"But that must have cost at least $5," "A leedle more and dot, but you see dot other railroad 'n't got one cent, and it makes her so mad ash nefer vhas."

"Well, what else?" "A chap comes in my place last week and looks all around and says: 'Vhas da Carl Dunder?'" "Vhas."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Chinese Business Methods.

The Chinese merchants keep as full a set of books as our merchants do, and they do business on a smaller margin, writes a Pekin correspondent. They keep account of stock and daily sales, and I have some of their ledgers. The Pekin banks have a clearing-house system. Each depositor has from his banker a book with two columns, in one of which are entered his deposits and in the other his drafts. He pays his creditors by checks on the bank and in the evening sends his book to be balanced.

The next morning the clerks of the various banks get together, checks are interchanged and the accounts of the various depositors are entered on their books. These banks are also expected to loan money to their depositors, and a man is supposed to have the right to draw on his bank for loans equal to double the amount of his average deposit.

But the stepping-stone to those divine institutions, the family and the home, which constitute the very foundation of our nation rests upon the health and strength of the people. It depends the sunshine and enjoyment of a home, and the joy of the family, thousands of wives and children are made to suffer by a weary existence in consequence of perplexing "female disorders," in total ignorance of the fact, that Dr. Pierce's Female-Headache-Remedy, a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of neuritis, prostrated, chronic, "female weakness," nervous debility, nervous prostration, chronic congestion, inflammation, ulceration and kindred ailments. Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded. All druggists.

Dr. Pierce's Female-Headache-Remedy and regulate the stomach, purify the blood, and generally. One dose purely vegetable. Heidelberg College, at Tiffin, has been presented with a museum valued at $50,000.

Entire freedom from injurious drugs makes "Fussell's Punch" the cigar most popular. Fuel gas made out of oil for domestic consumption will be supplied to residents of Canton and New Lisbon, before the close of the year.

Some Foolish People Allow a complete run until it gets beyond the reach of remedy. In most cases it will wear away, but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam they would find a positive cure. It is a fact that they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1. Trial size free. At all druggists.

A Snake Voudoes a Hen.

A farmer in the upper portion of this county was aroused one night not long since by the squalling of a hen on her roost in a cluster of vines near the house. Going out the hen was, apparently, transfixed with fright, and helplessness in her movements. A large snake was found near by, with eyes evidently set upon his prey. The hen continued her squalls, without moving, as if in a nightmare, till the snake was killed, when she fell from her perch, recovering and flying away, but has since been in a droop.—[Dalton (Ga.) Argus.

All the old potash, mercury and sarsaparilla mixtures left far behind. S. S. S. never fails to cure. This magic remedy builds the system up instead of tearing it down. If you ever had blood disease, don't fail to take S. S. S. If you have ever taken mercury and potash, get it out of your system by using Swift's Specific.

The Best in the World. I think Swift's Specific is the best blood remedy in the world. I have known it to make some wonderful cures of patients who were considered incurable.

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Children take it without objection.

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Children take it without objection.

For Cure of Sprains & Strains Use St. Jacobs Oil. Cures PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY WITHOUT RETURN OF PAIN. AT DRUGGISTS AND DEALERS EVERYWHERE. THE CHAS. A. VONBELG CO. BALTO.-MD.

Swift's Specific entirely cured me of a severe case of blood poison which obstinately resisted and refused to be cured for over 30 years. The regular medical remedies of mercury and potash only added fuel to the flame. I suffered during most of this long time with aches, twinges and some of the most offensive character, and was for a long time practically an invalid. In less than thirty days use of S. S. S. I was all cleared up and sound and well. This has been nearly a year ago, and no sign of any return of the old enemy. JOHN B. WILLIAMS, 87 Clark Street, Atlanta, Ga.

I have seen Swift's Specific used, and known of many cases of the worst form of blood disease which have been cured by it. I know the proprietors to be gentlemen of the highest type and unimpeachable. I recommend it as a great blood remedy, unequalled by anything that I know of. M. D. WHARTON, Pastor 1st Baptist Church, Montgomery, Ala.

TWO BOTTLES. Two bottles of Swift's Specific cured me of a bad condition of my blood, from which I had suffered for six months. It had blotches and sores which were painful and troublesome. S. S. S. is much better than potash and mercury mixtures, and I recommend it above all blood remedies. E. D. COPPOCK, Homeland, Va.

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Children take it without objection.

PISOSURE FOR CONSUMPTION. Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Children take it without objection.

CIRCUS MONEY. A splendid story for BOYS and GIRLS. The story is of a boy who was so poor that he had to work hard to earn his spending money. He met a girl who was very rich and they became friends. The girl helped him to get a better education and they were married.
