The related and bearded pension officials have the satisfaction of knowing that a dishonorable discharge is no bar to future increase of pensions.
GOVERNOR HOVEY, of Indiana, seems to be an unwise advocate of the Service Pension Bill. If he is correctly reported he wants the Republicans to party to buy votes with the money in the United States Treasury instead of indulging in "blocks of five."
Now is the time to discriminate between the men who want office and the men who want to serve. By the proper exercise of this discrimination by the voters of Freeland the council could be filled with men who would truly represent the great industrial interests of the town.
As recent events in the anthracite coal regions demonstrate, the "Polaks out of Polak" as Heine called them, are bringing to this country the fierce turbulence and barbarism which they have too often displayed at home. They find together too much freedom in this country for people of their savage passions and propensities.—Phila. Record.
The deadly car stove is somewhat behind its record this winter, but it has gone to work out West with an apparent determination to make up for lost time. All of which gives ghastly emphasis to the fact that, while the deadly car stove ought to have been kicked off the train long ago, it never has been.
DURING the last year the exports of cattle from the United States amounted in value to upward of $25,000,000, or nearly double the exportation of the previous year. Nor was this at the expense of the export trade in dressed and salted beef, as the increase in the exports of these products was in nearly the same proportion.
That particular law which authorizes the sheriff of the several counties of this Commonwealth to advertise all sheriff sales only in weekly papers published at the county seat is a swindle, a legalized swindle. It is an imposition on the public and should be stricken from the statutes. Who is there in Hazleton that ever sees the advertisements which are buried away in a county seat weekly? How many people even in Wilkes-Barre read the weekly papers? It is an unjust law which taxes the people of the lower end for advertising which is of no use. It is a plain steal. We are fifty miles away from the county seat. The number of county seat weekly papers that reach Hazleton and the outlying towns must be a very small one.
Apart from this why should the advertising of sheriff's sales, if it is a necessity be limited only to papers in the county seat? What are the reasons?
Why should it not be printed in the papers of Hazleton, of Pittston, of Freeland or Nanticoke?
When a business man advertises he seeks the best medium. When he aims to reach a certain class he seeks the papers that are most likely to answer his purpose and why should not the county officials pursue the same course?
All properties which are to be sold by the sheriff should be advertised in the papers published in the town where the sale is to take place. To put the advertisement in a weekly paper published at the county seat which rarely, as is the case in Hazleton, reaches the place where the money takes place, is a legalized swindling. It would be just as well not to advertise. This law should be repealed. The publishers of papers printed outside of the county seat should take up the cry. The uselessness of the present legalized swindling scheme of advertising must be apparent to all. It was the result of political jobbery in the first place. It is time to stop it now. If the county wants to advertise the best mediums should be chosen.
Another legalized advertising "medium" is the Legal Register. Litigants are charged high prices for advertising in it and its excuse for existing has long since died out. It should also be done away with.
The above is from the Hazleton Sentinel and expresses the opinion not only of the newspaper fraternity but of the public in general. The case in point is the sale of the Freeland planing mill property. A deputy sheriff comes to town tacks up a few notices on the telephone poles and goes away. He is scarcely out of town when by the heavy rains of the past few weeks they are down and all trace of the date of the sale is lost. In reference to that weekly pocket diary the Legal Register, all who have had anything to do with advertising legal notices know that within the last three months its rates has advanced, nearly 70 per cent. Yes, let us have a reform, and let the advertising of the sheriff be conducted on business principles and for the general welfare of all and not for the benefit of a few at the county seat.

Correspondence From the Capitol.
WASHINGTON, February 4, 1890.
The new code of rules now in course of preparation by the House committee on rules, brought together the Democratic members of the lower Congressional body Friday night with a view to discussing their plan of action. Mr. Carlisle, the Democratic member of that committee, explained in detail the nature of the principal changes proposed to be made in the old code. Briefly stated those changes were: That Mr. Carlisle as being particularly objectionable to the Democratic minority are the rules that do away with the old House calendar, leaving only the calendars of the committee of the whole and of the state of the Union; that make 100 a quorum of the committee of the whole; that re-establish the old morning hour rule when business must be considered in the order of the committee list, and bills must be regarded as pending until disposed of, and that fail to make privileged the motions to adjourn to a fixed day or take a recess. There was a long discussion over these proposed changes, which failed to result in the advancement of any practical scheme for the amelioration of the resumptive features of the new rules. Then the contested-election cases were talked over and Mr. Carlisle stated the purpose of the Republicans to call up the first of the West Virginia cases. It was generally agreed that the intention of the Republicans is to unseat as many Democrats and seat as many Republicans as possible in a long session over these cases. It was also agreed that the majority of the Republicans to call up the first of the West Virginia cases. It was generally agreed that the intention of the Republicans is to unseat as many Democrats and seat as many Republicans as possible in a long session over these cases. It was also agreed that the majority of the Republicans to call up the first of the West Virginia cases.
Some weeks ago, when President Harrison, contrary to the advice and against the protest of the congressional delegation, appointed Mr. Clark to be collector of the port of Chicago, Senator Farwell threatened to blow up the President with dynamite, so to speak. All the other Republican Senators sympathized with him, cordially, and the nomination was to be immediately rejected by the whole vote. But in the lapse of time Senator Farwell's rage has dwindled to below the shot-gun standard, the sympathy of the other Senators has lost its cordiality, and the whole Pickwickian fight will probably wind up with the confirmation of Mr. Clark. It is the same with the nomination of ex-Governor Warmouth to be the collector at New Orleans. All the Republican leaders of Louisiana in and out of Congress, are opposed to the nomination and have been from the first. They did all they could to prevent the President from making the nomination, and they have since done all they could to induce him to withdraw it. The last time the delegation called at the White House the President simply told them that he did not want to hear them, and that he had no patience with their interference. "I have disposed of the matter," said the President, "and that settles it." He had even gone so far as to say in a tone that implied a being victorious over the piousast Secretary of State.
The Blaine family are certainly showing a willingness almost equal to the willingness of the Harrisons to render the State some service. James G. Blaine, Jr., has been appointed clerk of the committee on foreign affairs in the House of Representatives. Secretary Blaine is at present engaged in a hand-to-hand contest with Congressman Ray of Pennsylvania. The Congressman wants to have W. L. Underwood appointed postmaster at Washington, Pa., but Secretary Blaine, not satisfied with the patronage of the State Department has extended his claws to the War and Navy Department, and insists upon having the postmastership at Washington, Pa., given to a cousin of his who lives at that place—a place by the way Secretary Blaine distinguished by being born there. The Congressman is making a gallant fight for his candidate and for his Congressional prerogative, but he has little hope of being victorious over the piousast Secretary of State.
The Republican majority in the United States Senate will get itself suspected of monarchical sympathies the first thing it knows. It shows a disinclination to encourage the republican republics on the earth. It refuses to vote for recognition of the new Republic of Brazil, and the committee on foreign relations has reported adversely Senator Call's resolution looking to the establishment of a Cuban Republic.
THERE is a movement on foot in Vermont, as well as in Kansas, to secure the relaxation of the Prohibitory Liquor laws. They cannot be enforced.
The Democrats of the House of Representatives at Washington are contending not merely for their constitutional rights, but for the rights which subservient Republican Representatives have surrendered to the arbitrary will of a Speaker. Representatives who are thus wanting in manly spirit and in respect for the dignity of their position deserve the scorn of the American people, and should be indignantly repudiated at the ballot-box.
So far the struggle in the House of Representatives has raged over preliminary and methods of action. Nothing definite has been accomplished. When a vote shall be reached in the contested election case now under consideration, if the Speaker should undertake to make up a quorum by having entered on the journal enough names of members not voting to make a majority the legality of his action should be immediately tested in the Supreme Court.
At the Republican poor district convention, held at Hazleton on Tuesday, A. S. Monroe, of Hazleton, was nominated for poor director and T. H. Williams, of Beaver Meadow, for auditor. At the same time H. E. Sweeney, of Drifton, was elected delegate to the state convention. It is stated on good authority that Mr. Sweeney is not pledged to any candidate for governor but will await the action of the Republicans of this district. The time and place to give expression to their sentiments was on Tuesday and that through their representatives in convention. Where are the Osborne boomers now!

Muscular Christianity.
A Detroit correspondent tells a good story about H. O. Wills, the evangelist, who was long a noted bumper in that town.
Persons who knew Wills in the old days appreciated the struggle he was making toward a better life. A few, however, began with his change of character to jeer and jibe him in season and out of season, seeking to drive him and ridicule back into the gutters. One of these is a man named Dolton, who for several years has sought opportunities to abuse Brother Wills on the streets and especially on the street cars. Wills, though a powerful man physically, bore this outrage uncomplainingly for a time.
Yesterday Wills boarded a street car and found his tormentor there. Several ladies were also in the car. Dolton began his petty persecutions. Wills stood it with remarkable patience for a time; then he begged Dolton to desist. This had no effect, and Wills hit Dolton on the nose with his hand to quiet his persecutor. Another gentleman passenger also urged the conductor to go to Wills' assistance, but with no result. Then Wills turned to Dolton. "My friend you must stop this kind of monkey work. I can't do anything while there are ladies in the car, but I want you to understand me. You let up on your abuse I'll trouble you." Dolton laughed derisively. The ladies got out. Dolton resumed his taunts, becoming more and more abusive. His victim again issued a note of warning, but Dolton believed that the evangelist's religion would not permit him to take any action. Suddenly it came clearly to Wills that to get an answer to his prayer for protection from the tormentor he must use the means placed in his hand, and he sailed into Dolton.
He hopped every part of the car with the person of his tormentor. The swish-swish of the hand around the ear could be heard a block away above the din and roar of the busy thoroughfare.
Dolton cried for mercy, but Brother Wills had a duty to perform and he did it nobly. Not until Dolton was thoroughly whipped, until he admitted his meanness, did Wills let up. Then, with a parting sneer at the trembling man's head, the evangelist said: "Now you go home and thank God I did not kill you."
He then sank into the seat and sobbed over his giving away to anger. Later he went to Justice Miner and explained the circumstances. The Judge congratulated him for the good work, and Brother Wills was happy.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.
Engineering Exploits.
"The engineering exploits at the Paris exhibition," says the New York Sun, "revolve in many cases what might be called axioms. An arch has always been rigid at its crest, a tower broad, thick, and solid at its base; and just in proportion to the span of the arch or the height of the tower have the key-stone and base been ponderous. In the hall of machines, with a truss-arch span of 500 feet, the crest of the arch is in no way united, but the two elements of the arch simply lean against each other, a transverse steel rod receiving the enormous pressure of contact. The base of the arch, instead of widening out and being heavily grounded in masonry to stand lateral stresses, comes down to a point and rests directly on a cast-iron plate with a circular bearing. These audacious contrivances are to permit expansion and contraction, and the whole vast roof, over a sixth of a mile long, rises and falls with every change of temperature."
Zinc Water.
The recent discovery by a New England chemist of a cheap plan of dissolving zinc by combining it with hydrochloric turns out to be a very valuable one. The product is a zinc water which has the power of making wood, to which it has been applied, absolutely fire-proof.
Setting Down on a Fire.
An old story is being resurrected against a usually quiet but somewhat excitable resident of the suburbs. It is alleged that the gentleman in question discovered that a fire had been started in the attic of his house, through the heat of the chimneys. With rare presence of mind he rushed down stairs and seized a milk pitcher from the kitchen table, rushed into the kitchen, threw the milk out of the pitcher, pumped some water into it, and rushed up stairs only to find that his wife had seized a large pitcher of water from one of the bed-rooms in the upper story and extinguished the incipient conflagration. As there were four large pails of water on the two upper stories, the progress of mental reasoning which induced the excited resident to make such a ferocious onslaught on the milk pitcher would be extremely interesting to trace, if such a thing were possible. He should have had the presence of mind possessed by another property owner, who discovered that a spark from a neighboring conflagration had lit upon the slightly slanting roof of his house, and had set fire to the shingles. All the buckets and tubs and pitchers had gone for use in the big fire, and there was no one to send over to bring them back. But the owner of the house, even in the moment of peril, kept cool-headed. He rushed to the pond, which stood by the house, and deliberately sat down in the water. To race up stairs and out on the roof was the work of a moment, and then he "sat on" the fire in more senses than one! He saved the house.—Boston Advertiser.
Likes Home Customs Best.
At the Isles of Shoals they tell the tale that a lecturer went thither to lecture to the assembled guest upon the character and characteristics of the Japanese, and in the course of his remarks he dwelt upon a few facts that the self-containing people do not use explosives, profanity being unknown in their land, and that equally are they ignorant of the goody fashion of kissing. These statements had their due effect upon the audience, it being observed that the masculine portion of the hearers were the more impressed by the former statement and the feminine portion by the latter. As the audience was dispersing, with all the chatter of comment, gossip and banter which belongs to such a gathering one young woman was overheard confiding to another her sentiments in a phrase which was at once most human, expressive and picturesque.
"As for me?" she said, "give me a country where they kiss and cuss!"
It was felt that on the whole she might be regarded as having pretty well sized up the situation.—Boston Courier.

An illiterate voter who cannot read could not cast a secret ballot for candidates whom he might desire to vote for. He would have to consult some one who could read. It would be, therefore, no infraction of his right to provide him with responsible guides in the persons of officials who should be oath-bound to impartial action to mark his ballot for him.
The workmen of Pennsylvania have been again and again deceived by the assertions of the Republican party organs that a high tariff tax on the industries of the country means high wages to labor, but the example of the chief exponent of the doctrine turning his eyes on the streets will probably do much to open their eyes to the hollowness of such pretensions.
The butchers of Indiana and their attorneys argue that dressed beef is subject to the most stringent police regulations short of absolute prohibition; and that the inspection of cattle on the hoof—which is in effect prohibition—is the only practicable means of inspection. On these grounds they urge that the Dressed Beef act of Indiana is not in violation of the Interstate Commerce law. They are not likely to progress far before the Supreme Court with that argument.
