Another Old Resident Called Away.

Fred. Miller, one of the oldest residents in this part of the country, passed peacefully from life to death at his home in Sandy Run Monday evening at the advanced age of 83 years, 5 months and 5 days. The deceased was born in Germany in 1807, and came to this country in 1847, and shortly after settled in Hazleton, where he remained until 1866, when he moved his family to Highland, and was one of the first settlers in that thriving village. About three years ago he removed to Sandy Run. He leaves a wife and seven children—four sons and three daughters—namely, George, at Sandy Run; Christian, at South Heberton; John S., at Highland, and Frederick, of Sandy Run. The daughters are, Susan, wife of James B. Atoms, of Sandy Run; Lizzie, wife of Reuber Zorn, of Sandy Run; and Annie, living at home. The funeral takes place to-day at 2 p. m. to the Freeland cemetery.

A Successful Mission.

The celebration of the devotion of the Forty Hours began at St. Ann's Church Sunday afternoon and was one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in this part of the country, the large church being full at each service. Rev. Father McNally opened on Sunday evening and preached a powerful sermon, which captured the large audience; Rev. Father Gummisky, of Hazleton, preached on Monday evening, and Rev. Father Maszotas, of Andover, on Tuesday evening. Among the visiting clergy besides those already mentioned, were Father Bergrath, of White Haven; Father Farrell, of Friendsville, and Father Maszotas, of St. Kasimer's Polish Church, Freeland.

Death Claims Another Victim.

Patrick O'Donnell, ex-supervisor of Foster township, died at his home, near the Jeddo tunnel, Tuesday evening after a short illness, aged 58 years. Mr. O'Donnell has been a resident of that place for the past 30 years, and was in good health up to within a week of his death. His funeral will take place to-morrow. Interment in St. Ann's cemetery. McNulty, undertaker.

Correspondence From the Capitol.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16, 1890.

The re-election of autocratic Speaker Reed by a large majority is another illustration of the proverbial fondness of a certain class of American voters for "the man who dares." Whether he is right or wrong in his daring, the man of courage, of audacity, who strikes out vigorously in almost any direction which does not immediately hurt the pocket of a large class of citizens, is almost sure of winning admiration and applause. The old Saxon love of pluck and vigor is strong in the American soul. Audacity, which directed against the Constitution, the time-honored usages of Congress, or the funds of a bank, many people are inclined to admire. Doubtful or dangerous deeds are applauded if they are only done with splendid vigor and boldness. It is not possible that this trait in the American character more than anything else does Reed owe his present triumph. And it is not a reassuring thought to those who believe in American institutions and desire them perpetuated, if Reed is thus applauded for overturning the time-honored usages of the House of Representatives by the methods of a Czar it will be natural for him and others like him to seek fresh applause and aggrandizement in pressing forward to new and more dangerous and more evil results. Reed and his friends will claim that the big majority means that the voters wanted to show their approval of the Lodge Federal Election bill and their desire that it should pass. In all human probability it means nothing of the kind. It means simply that the voters were thoughtlessly tickled at the audacious, ruthless way of the new "man from Maine."

Mr. Kennedy who deluged Senator Quay with oratorical nitric acid recently in the House of Representatives, may escape punishment for the present, but the wrath of Pennsylvania Republicans is stored away not alone for him, but for others of his Republican colleagues from Ohio. In fact, there has been a feud between the Pennsylvania and Ohio Republicans almost from the beginning of this Administration, and of course it started in a quarrel over the distribution of the spoils.
 Early in the summer of 1889 a man from Ohio and a man from Pennsylvania got their eyes rigidly fixed on a particularly desirable place in the Treasury Department. The sleuth-hound tenacity of the Ohioan in pursuit of an Office has passed into a proverb. The Pennsylvania man was given the office by the President, but they deserve it all the same. Each of the men who lusted for the office in the Treasury Department was backed by about all the influence there was in his state. As may be readily imagined, the approach of these two ponderous bodies towards the same point threatened a disaster that was simply appalling in its possible consequences. So a truce was called, and an agreement entered into by which it was agreed that both sides neither should do anything without informing the other.
 Things remained in this position for some time, when to the dismay and anger of the Pennsylvanians the Ohio man was given the office by the President. Now the Pennsylvanians charge that the attack of Mr. Kennedy on Senator Quay was another evidence of the treachery and jealousy of the Ohioans, and they declare that no matter what is done by the Pennsylvania man, they will have their revenge on Ohio, and will take it on Ohio's most favorite son. This means that not only will Mr. Kennedy be demolished if opportunity offers, but that Major McKinley will also be made to suffer and die the political death. Whether McKinley is defeated or not in the coming Congressional elections, in all probability he will next year be the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio. If he is defeated by Mr. Campbell that will be the end of him, and Pennsylvania's thirst for Ohio blood will be slaked; but if McKinley is elected Governor he will at once take a leading place among Presidential probabilities for 1892. Then will come Pennsylvania's long-for opportunity, and with Senator Quay at the head of the National Committee, she will be in a position to take a revenge that will be simply cloying in its sweetness.

The People's Fight.

The following circular has been issued by a committee of the Tariff Reform Club:
 Headquarters Campaign Finance Committee, Philadelphia Tariff Reform Club.—To the citizens of Pennsylvania: Your interests are involved in the election of Congressmen this fall. The monopoly party proposes in the McKinley Tariff Bill to still further advance the present duties on both raw materials and manufactured goods, thereby making you pay more for what you use. The price of labor or farm products will not be advanced and no one will be benefited. By this measure but corporations, trusts, combinations and some special manufacturers would cause an average saving to each voter of at least $50 a year on the necessities of life over what he would pay for the same articles if the McKinley Tariff bill should become a law.
 There are twenty-eight Congressmen to be elected in Pennsylvania this fall. The monopoly party have control of the Offices and patronage, also free access to the purses of the protected monopolies, and we believe they will use money to influence the results in the debatable districts.
 Many of the districts are close, and if properly organized can be carried for the free raw material candidates.
 We appeal to you for a voluntary contribution toward helping the cause. Money will be needed for legitimate expenses, such as meetings, mines, law, printing, etc. This is the people's fight. Every contribution counts. Will you not assist by sending at once at least $1; or if you can afford it $5 or $10. Do not leave this for your neighbor to send, but send yourself and see that he sends his also. In union there is strength, and thousands of small contributions brought into one fund and under one direction will bring success.
 Please send your contributions to HENRY J. MARIS, Chairman, P. O. Box 1178, Philadelphia.
 Committee—HENRY J. MARIS, Of J. M. Maris & Co., Wholesale Druggists' Sundries.
 JOHN A. BRILL, Of J. G. Brill Car Co.
 THOMAS DEVLIN, Of Thomas Devlin & Co., Hardware Manufacturers.
 WILSON WELSH, Of Hershey Tailor.
 HENRY HAYMANN, Of T. J. Dunn & Co., Wholesale Cigars and Tobacco.

The Game Law.

As fall approaches it is well to remember that the legal regulations for the killing of game in Turkeys, from October 15 to January 1; ducks and geese, from September 1 to May 15; plover, from July 4 to January 1; quail, from November 1 to December 15; pheasants, from October 1 to January 1; animals, deer and elk, from October 1 to December 1; squirrels, from September 1 to January 1; rabbits, from November 1 to January 1; fishes, brook or speckled trout, from April 15 to July 15; lake trout, from October 1 to January 1; black bass, pickerel and salmon, from June 1 to January 1; German carp, from September 1 to May 1.
 The anthracite coal trade is in a much healthier condition than it has been at any previous time this year, and reports from all quarters indicate an improving tendency. There is considerable inquiry for coal, and the demand for domestic prices is daily increasing. The controlling influences appear to now have the anthracite trade well in hand, and the larger producing interests are working in better harmony. The prices for coal are firmer, and an advance on the last price is confidently expected. All of the furnace sizes being produced are going directly into consumption, and the stock of the domestic sizes which have been accumulating for several months past are being reduced in supplying the increased demand for them. The small steam sizes are plentiful and consequently are not so firm in price.
 The current number of Seward's Coal Trade Journal, says: "The hard coal market is apparently on the mend; prices are likely to be higher than those current in the past ninety days; the condition of affairs has been brought about solely by the restriction of the output to something like accord with the demand; the current prices are not high, but the movement of coal is larger than it has been; the stocks in first hands are less, but the sizes held have changed materially since a month ago."
 The total amount of anthracite coal sent to market for the week ending September 6, as reported by the several carrying companies, was 651,088 tons, compared with 739,922 tons in the corresponding week last year, a decrease of 88,834 tons. The total amount of anthracite coal sent to market in the year 1890 was 22,587,070 tons compared with 23,140,330 tons for the same period last year, a decrease of 553,260 tons.—Ledger.

The Dogs' Convention.

Hurrah! the day has come at last, and now let Hinker thrum: The muzzled canines of the past With open mouths assemble. And resolutions strong they pass, Condemning one man's power; To muzzle their snouts and make them gasp Through many a sultry hour.
 First Philo Hayes got on the stump, And the meeting called to order; Saying "muzzled were we for many a day While just across the border.
 On the Five Point streets the dogs ran free, And Rinker dare not touch them; They could snarl and bark, or wag their tails And all he could do was 'watch them.'"
 Mike Zemany's pup was the next to bark, And said "I would like to second A motion made to investigate; And have some matters reasoned.
 "How much it cost to muzzle the dogs? How much it cost to dig their graves? And how much it cost to fill them?"
 Bill Watkin's pug then rose to say, That he was never muzzled; His snout was short, and to make a fit The harnessmakers puzzled.
 At this point rose a terrier small, And said "I would like to mention, That my boss, John Smith, across the street Declared his firm intention.
 "To obey the laws the council made, And muzzle my little nose up; So into a collar box I jumped, And stayed till he did close up."
 Then the hounds and pups began to bark, They wagged their tails and shouted; Their muzzles were off, their tongues were loose, Their enemies all were routed.
 They were bound to have a jolly time, Their sorrows to joy were turned; They voted to bite Bob Rinker's legs, And the meeting then adjourned.
