FREELAND, SEPTEMBER 18, 1890.

The demonstration that it requires but one session of the present Congress to convert a $70,000,000 surplus into a $60,000,000 deficit is liable to classification under the title of pernicious activity.

Some men pose as anti-monopolists and profess deep sympathy about this time every year for the poor working-man—yet they are the greatest monopolists in their section, and add to their riches by making the poor man poorer. Will workmen continue to be thus fooled?

The workmen of this country have an excellent chance to show the faith that is in them, by voting at the next election for Thomas Dullard and Thomas McGraw for County Commissioners. With these two men in the Commissioners' office, the laboring man and the farmers interest will be carefully looked after.

The House of Representatives has never had an opportunity to consider the McKinley Tariff bill in detail. It was prepared in committee and adopted without discussion. Since it has come back from the Senate in a new form, the House should have a chance to debate its provisions; but the Republican caucus has determined that it shall not be debated except in conference committee. This performance reduces the business of legislation to a farce. There has been no legislation. There has been a scheme of taxation arranged between political leaders and parties in interest, which will be thrust upon the statute book without even the formality of impartial consideration or the opportunity of change.—Phila. Record.

Candidates Barclay and Stewart.

The Republican candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs, Thomas J. Stewart, continues traveling over the State attending fairs, Grand Army camp fires and political meetings wherever he can find them. His duties are at Harrisburg, where he goes regularly once a month to draw his salary.

The Democratic candidate for the same office, Capt. William H. Barclay, is constantly at his desk in the Pittsburgh Pension Office performing his duties to the government and the pensioners of the district. He attended camp-fires along the Potomac and throughout the South during the war, when there was danger instead of festivity around the bean kettle and the soup bowl. But he did his duty then as he is doing it now. There is a contrast in this which should invite public reflection. The citizen can see in it which of the two men deserves most at the hands of the public. Barclay attends to his duty while Stewart is begging votes.

Chris. Magee Bolts the Ticket.

In an interview last week with a reporter Chris. Magee reiterated his statement that he is not supporting Delamater, and mentioned the significant fact that out of the seven Republican newspapers published in Allegheny county only one is supporting Quay's candidate for Governor. No one can or ever did question the stalwart Republicanism of Chris. Magee, and his stand against Delamater is of the highest importance because it is that of a prominent leader in the Republican party, and is similar to that of thousands of Republican voters in the western part of the State.

In speaking of his position Mr. Magee said: I am not supporting Mr. Delamater, and there are a great many others who are not. In Western Pennsylvania there is a great deal of discontent among the Republicans and a very strong feeling against Delamater, mainly because he is Quay's man. Just what the result will be it is hard to say, and I doubt if any one can come anywhere near it until election day. I admire Mr. Pattison very much, indeed. The people of Pennsylvania did not until recently realize the gravity of the situation. People outside of the State saw it better and clearer than the residents. Republicans all over the State were dissatisfied with Quay and his methods, and the campaign will be very exciting.

Bossism in Pennsylvania.

The words of the Scranton Truth, reproduced below, are commended to the consideration of intelligent and patriotic citizens. The able editor of that progressive journal indulges in no vituperation, but he protests in dignified and forceful language against the degeneracy of political leaders and the tendency to demoralization which follows.

The one remedy against the growing evil is suggested by the Truth. It is in the re-education of the party whose councils are corrupted by bad leadership and selfish men. Half-way measures will not avail. The ulcer must be cut away root and all. The defeat of Delamater will accomplish that.

The protest of Editor Barrett is not the complaint of a disappointed man. He is not a candidate for office. He wants no place. But he is a patriotic citizen, who believes that prosperity depends upon honest government, and that public integrity cannot be hoped for from a party with a leadership that is tarnished. In this he is right.

The boss-ridden State of Pennsylvania, with all its boasted intelligence and vast wealth, has long been a reproach in the eyes of the nation because of its abject subservience to the rule of petty bosses and commercial politicians. With a constitution authorizing not less than a million dollars annually for a public school system the grand old Commonwealth has permitted itself to become the plaything of counterfeit statesmen. It would not be the subject of much wonder to find unscrupulous men of brilliant powers in the lead, but the shame of it is that the only quality for which Pennsylvania's political bosses are conspicuous is low cunning, coupled with an utter disregard of every principle of manhood and honor, such as should belong to the leaders of men.

Having entrenched themselves in power through an overwhelming Republican majority, the Republican bosses of Pennsylvania no longer respect the will of the people, and in utter defiance of decent public opinion, they select as their candidates for office the most pliant and submissive partisan they can find. Then the people, the intelligent masses of the Republican party, who were ignored in the choice of a candidate, as in the case of Mr. Delamater, the nominee for Governor, are expected to roll up "old-fashioned majorities" through appeals to partisan prejudices, and the revival of played out issues, which have been worn threadbare in the creation of majorities for years.

This system prevails not only at the very head and front of the great Republican party of Pennsylvania, but it penetrates right through the organization down to the election of a village constable, and every man who shows sufficient strength of will and individuality to protest against it, is immediately blacklisted and marked out for political punishment. In this way a great organization, with a proud history behind it as the exponent and champion of liberty, has been thwarted and dwarfed in the Keystone State until it has become a common machine for the elevation to power and place of a set of unscrupulous incompetents.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania are a patient people. Time and again they have permitted themselves to be deluded into the support of Cameronism and Quayism rather than take issue with the party they loved so well and whose grand traditions they cherished so sacredly, but they are beginning to realize that they owe it to the party itself to shake off the benevolent boss domination that has been degrading it for years, and bring representative men of honor and honesty to the front. It is high time there was an end of Boss and Boodle politics in this State, and the present campaign affords ample opportunity for giving both these vicious influences the quietus. It cannot be done, however, unless a sufficient number of self-respecting Republicans firmly resolve that they will teach the arrogant party bosses a lesson that they will not learn in any other way than through crushing defeat.

In addition to defeating the gubernatorial candidate of the bosses let the people elect a Legislature pledged to the realization of ballot reform at the earliest possible opportunity, and thus a double victory will be achieved for manhood and for freedom. The boss and boodle system of conducting politics stands condemned before every intelligent man in Pennsylvania; now let the rule of the bosses be relegated to oblivion and the rule of the people prevail.

The above is from the Pittsburg Times, a staunch Republican paper, and is an indication of the feeling that exists in Western Pennsylvania.

Quay Won't Reply.

The friends of Senator Quay give it out that he will not reply to the terrible arraignment of Representative Kennedy (an account of which the Truth published in its last issue). Of course he will not. There's nothing for Quay to say, because the charges are true. Mr. Kennedy said that Senator Quay is "charged with corruption," that he is "a branded criminal," that his "silence is confession of guilt" and that "he should be driven from the head of a party whose very life his presence imperils." Quay will not reply because he cannot.

An honest man in Senator Quay's place would boldly defend himself. An honest man would not keep still while being branded as a felon. And by his cowardly cringing, sneaking, humiliating silence, Quay marks himself in the light of all men as a convict—without the striped clothing.

Philadelphia Republicans for Pattison.

The self-respecting Republican business and professional men of Philadelphia have organized and issued an address to the voters of the State. The address is a departure from the usual type of campaign literature. It is as far from platitudes and pretence as it is exempt from rhetorical affectation. But it is the plain practical utterances of sincere men, who aim to accomplish good results in a manly way, and will carry conviction wherever it is read. The gentlemen whose signatures are appended to the address are widely known and of Republican predilections. Clear thinkers and logical reasoners, they have correctly interpreted the issues drawn by the parties in the pending contest, and, with a courage that is commendable and a sincerity that is admirable, they declare their intentions in the premises. It is upon such circumstances as this the hopes of the future are based. When bad men are no longer able to impose on credulity their power will cease, and with them venality will disappear from public place. Senator Quay has endeavored to accomplish selfish purposes by concealing them under false pretences. But the Lincoln Independent Republicans have stripped off the mask and left the scheme disclosed. There is but one issue between the parties and that is the perpetuation of Quayism by the election of Delamater or the elimination of it through the triumph of Pattison. The following is a part of the address, which is respectfully referred to our Republican readers and their friends:

Mr. Quay is the acknowledged, unblushing champion of political corruptionists. He is silent under a recent, responsible and repeated charge of the embezzlement of public money; he selects Mr. Delamater as candidate for Governor, and a pliant convention ratifies his selection; the party platform endorses Mr. Quay and Mr. Delamater stands on the party platform and no other. The conclusion is irresistible that the election of Mr. Delamater will have as its main and most potent result the perpetuation of Quayism, and his permanent entrenchment in the Republican party of the State as its acknowledged leader and counsellor, the Representative of its principles and the exponent of its policy.

The election of Mr. Delamater means the public endorsement of Mr. Quay, and the increase of his prestige, not only in the State but in the country, the encouragement of his methods, the elevation to greater and greater power of men made in his mould. The election of Mr. Pattison will secondarily give to the State a tried, trusty Executive, but primarily it will be a rebuke, felt not only in Pennsylvania, but throughout the land, to a man who has corrupted and dishonored a great party and a great State; to a man who has given his strength for the triumphs of political methods which are not only false and vicious in themselves, but which, if unchecked, will accomplish the ultimate ruin of free institutions, and in past ages they have accomplished the downfall of empires.

Quay Selects Delamater's Cabinet.

In pursuance of his expressed determination to own and control a Governor, Senator Quay has already begun to distribute the patronage of the Delamater administration "in the event of his election."

Upon authority of the most undoubted source it is stated that Senator Quay has selected the Hon. Lyman D. Gilbert, of Harrisburg, for Attorney General; Gen. Frank Reeder, of Easton, for Secretary of the Commonwealth, and George H. North, of this city, for Adjutant General under Delamater "in the event of his election."

Thus Mr. Delamater has a Cabinet ready made for him. Without questioning the ability or integrity of the gentleman, it is a little humiliating that the appointment of the Governor should be asserted so early even "in the event of his election."—Phila. Herald.

Quay Dare Not Bring Suit.

The Philadelphia News, whose editorial making war upon Quay and Delamater was reproduced in the Truth's last week, says it has received authentic information that the friends of Mr. Quay are pressing him to bring suit against The News for libel. But The News refuses to believe that Quay will do this. "Who ever heard of a rascal like Matt Quay," asks The News, "giving anyone a chance to prove that he ought to be in a grated cell, or of giving anyone a chance to send him there?" That's plain talking, to be sure, coming as it does from a leading Republican paper. This is a very pointed way of stating the case, but it covers the whole ground exactly, and, as it comes from a Republican source, it must be most humiliating to the self-respect and moral sentiment of every conscientious and honest Republican in the State to be associated with a party that has as its head and principal leader a man that is now recognized the world over as little better than a common thief.

Allegheny County Against Quay.

Two months and two weeks have passed since Delamater's nomination, and, instead of "blowing over," the dissatisfaction with the man and the methods employed for his elevation has grown in to open revolt that extends all over the State. The uprising of the Republicans who have no personal grievances is so pronounced that no man who is acquainted with the facts will honestly dispute the claim that the western Republican counties—from Allegheny, which gave Harrison 20,000 majority in 1888, down—are doubtful ground; that the close counties—Centre, Bedford, Fayette and Westmoreland—are certain to give good majorities for Pattison; that such Democratic centres as Clearfield, Elk and Clarion counties will pass their previous records; and that, if reports from the eastern counties are not exaggerated, nothing that Senator Quay can now do can prevent the defeat of Delamater and the election of Pattison by a large majority.

What We Want.

All hail the dawn of a new day breaking,
When a strong-armed nation shall take away
The weary burdens from backs that are aching
With maximum labor and minimum pay;
When no man is honored who hoards his millions;
When no man feasts on another's toil,
And God's poor, suffering, starving billions
Share shall share his riches of sun and soil.

There is gold for all in the earth's broad bosom,
There is food for all in the land's great store,
Enough is provided, if rightly divided;
Let each man take what he needs—no more.
Shame on the miser with unused riches,
Who robs the toiler to swell his hoard,
Who beats down the wage of the digger of ditches
And steals the bread from the poor man's board.

Shame on the owner of mines, whose cruel
And selfish measures have brought him
Wealth,
While the ragged wretches who dig his fuel
Are robbed of comfort and hope and health.
Shame on the ruler who rides in his carriage
Bought with the labor of half-paid men—
Men who are shut out of home and marriage
And are herded like sheep in a hovel pen.

Let the clarion voice of the nation wake him
To broader vision and fairer play,
Or let the hand of a just law abate him
Till his ill-gained dollars shall roll away.
Let no man dwell under a mountain of plunder,
Let no man suffer with want and cold;
We want right living, not mere alms-giving.
We want not dividing of labor and gold,
—(Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in New York World.)

A Siamese Execution.

The death penalty of capital punishment by decapitation was inflicted on a robber and murderer at Bangkok Aug. 30 at 8 o'clock in the morning, on the execution grounds near Wat Mat Ka San at Sapatadin, says the Kangkok Times. The criminal was a Siamese, who while attempting a burglary at Muang Rah Yong murdered a Chinese man named Chin Chee in a somewhat brutal manner by means of a bludgeon.

Shortly after 7 o'clock in the morning representatives of the four special departments of the government began to put in an appearance on the ground. They were followed at intervals by members of the staff of executioners, with attendants. Shortly afterward two large boats belonging to the war department, manned by sailors and containing a detachment of soldiers under the command of a Siamese captain of infantry, arrived with the prisoner. The arrival of these boats was heralded by the sound of a hand-gong, struck significantly at intervals by the person who held a long, thin, pointed staff, struck on shipboard, as one-two, one-two, one-two. This sounding of the gong was continued regularly during the preparations for the execution, and was a particularly solemn feature of the proceedings. The doomed man was attended by the officers of Borisaph jail, and secured by means of chairs, his head, however, being fixed in portable stocks about five feet long, borne on his shoulders, his hands being put through between the long bars forming the stocks, and there secured at the wrists by means of small wooden shackles who held the prisoner in the boat the criminal was seated on the grass, in full view of all. He was a fair specimen of his class, as far as strength and power were concerned, and apparently about 30 years of age. Although a few partially healed scars were visible on his back, from which it may be judged that he had undergone corporal punishment to some extent, the criminal showed no traces of suffering or hardship, and had certainly been far from starved during his detention in the jail. He was stolid and seemingly indifferent as regards the preparations going on, and with his future gaze in full sight, after signifying his desire for food, ate a very hearty meal of rice, fish, and fruit, which was provided for him. On one occasion he actually laughed.

Meanwhile the temporary altar was being made the repository of the swords of the executioner's staff, to the number of fully sixteen weapons of various makes, and one special weapon adorned as to its handle with a carved head, and the purpose of which will appear hereafter. The swords proper were placed on the super-altar, all in order, the special weapon, a short, thick, sharp cleaver, on the lower altar. The altar was then crowded with offerings in the shape of cooked (boiled) pigs' heads, fowls, plantains, limes, coconuts, custard, apples, cakes, chutney, samsu, and other articles, what could not be placed on the altar being arranged on the ground on palm leaves before it.

The executioner-in-chief, who was distinguished from the others by his white gold-fringed drawers under his panyon, the others wearing red ones, then arrayed himself in his red vest and bound his forehead with a red sash, all the staff doing likewise. The criminal was then placed in a central position, executed on the palm leaves, the stock and neck chains removed, and his elbows secured to a short bamboo post placed in the ground behind him, which, by the by, had also been under the altar during the preparatory ceremonies there. The executioner then talked with the criminal, apparently asking questions as to the crime, and nodded and spoke assent to what had been said. The special attendant, acting somewhat in the capacity of a priest, with the executioner, marked out a line which was easily recognizable on the neck of the prisoner, and continued to talk in an apparently consolatory strain while the car officers of the prisoner were quietly closed with clay. The religious ceremonies were still being performed, and the prisoner's hands were being placed in the hands of the prisoner and then set up in the ground before him. The minister of the law then, with stately tread, came from the altar behind the prisoner, and, while a solemn hush fell on all around, he drew nearer and nearer the doomed man.

The executioner himself is about the medium size, perhaps some 50 years of age, but quick and active in movement, with a face which rather betokens benevolence and deep religious feeling than aught else. A look of determination and stern sense of duty was on his face as he approached the criminal, and before the latter could possibly be aware, with a single sweep of his sword in his right hand he severed the spinal column and the whole neck with the exception of a small portion of skin under the chin, which he afterward cut with his sword. The head of the criminal was exposed then for a short time on a pole, while the irons were being removed from the legs of the body by cutting off the heels with the special weapon spoken of previously. It lacked two minutes to 8:30 in the morning when the fatal stroke was given, and at 8:35 the body had been doubled in the grave, the head thrown in and covered with earth, and traces of the recent event removed. For rapidity of execution, painlessness, solemnity, decorum, and all the requirements of justice, it is very evident that Siam is indefinitely ahead of most eastern nations, if not of western ones (and even that is open to serious question) in its methods of inflicting and carrying out a sentence of capital punishment.

According to a calculation made at the United States legation at Paris it is estimated that 50,000 Americans have visited the exhibition. The Matin, reckoning the expenses at Paris of each of the visitors at 5,000 francs, calculates that the total sum they must have spent there cannot be less than 250,000,000 francs.

Laughter in Different Keys.

People who laugh in a broad Latin "A" are open-hearted, honest, fond of noisy jocundity, but perhaps of volatile mood. Excessive, jerking laughter, however, is an evidence of vulgarity. Those laughing in a dry "A" are respectable, but little expansive, and a hard lot of people. When the Latin "E" prevails, there prevails also a phlegmatic, melancholy temper. Timorous, unsteady people, also those imbued with malignity, always laugh in a kind of swelling "I." Laughter in "O" is the utterance of proud, bold, imperious, somewhat bantering people. Beware of those who laugh in "oo" (o). They are traitors, haters, scoundrels.
