VOL. IV. No. 4.

FREELAND, PA., THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1891.

$1.00 PER YEAR.

BRIEF ITEMS.

The Driftion end of the D. S. & S. Railroad is rapidly nearing completion.
—A very entertaining letter from our Eckley correspondent has been unavoidably omitted to-day.
—A strolling musical trio, consisting of two men and a her, disturbed the peace around town this week.
—John Miller, of Drifton, has been appointed an engineer on the D. S. & S., to take the position vacated by John H. Haas.
—Gilbert Smith has opened a business place at South and Washington Streets, where he will sell ice cream, candy and temperance drinks.
—On August 15 the Freeland firemen will run their fourth annual excursion to the Glen. Remember the date and accompany the boys.
—At Eckley last Thursday Geo. E. Berner, of Mt. Carmel, and Miss Bella Riekart of Hazle Brook, were married by Rev. John Ireland.
—The Lehigh Valley Company could confer no greater favor upon its local patrons than to give them a Sunday evening train from Freeland.

—A Hungarian wedding took place in town on Saturday. The festivities began at 8 P. M. on Friday evening and continued until midnight on Saturday.
—James Babcock and son were injured at No. 6 Upper Lehigh, on Tuesday, by a runaway car, the former about the head, and the latter having his hand broken.
—Property owners in the Five Points deserve credit for the progressive spirit shown this summer in laying substantial sidewalks, thereby keeping pace with thorough improvements.

—Jos. Neuberger has purchased a large stock of shoes and in a few days will be able to serve his patrons and the public with shoes at prices lower than the cost of manufacture.
—A large force of men began work this week for the DePiero Bros. hotel, at Centre and Front Streets. The building will be three stories and equipped with all modern conveniences.

—A lady's gold bracelet was lost on Saturday evening, July 4, between the Polish Catholic Church and Cox's new houses. The finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving it at this office.
—The Young Men of Drifton will entertain their friends with a picnic on Saturday evening at the Drifton Park. Picnic commences at 5 o'clock. G. H. C. Orchestra will furnish the music.

—Paul Summa, who kept a restaurant at Main and Centre Streets about three years ago, had his safe blown open at Shenandoah last week. The thieves secured $300 and a large amount of jewelry.
—The tax duplicate for Freeland borough is now ready, and Collector Moore will receive all taxes from July 18 until September 18. A discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed to parties paying within these dates.

—Quite a number from here yesterday attended the dedication of the chapel at St. Joseph's Convent, Hazleton. Fathers Falliee and McNally, of St. Ann's Church, assisted Bishop O'Hara in the ceremonies.
—To-morrow evening Local Assembly 335, K. of L., will hold a picnic at the Firemen's Park, and they extend a cordial invitation to everyone. Refreshments for sale on the grounds and dancing music by DePiero's.

—The Kiekappo Indian Medicine Company will remain in town only a few more days, and persons wishing any of this medicine should procure it at once. Entertainments given every evening near the Lehigh Valley depot.

—On Saturday at the Greek Catholic Church a ceremony known as the blessing of the banners will take place. At 11 A. M. a parade of the Freeland and Hazleton Greek societies, accompanied by the St. Patrick's Cornet Band, will be made through the principal streets, to be followed by services at the church.
—Patrick Conaghan, formerly of Freeland, was injured on the 4th inst. while at work in the Lehigh Valley Company's yards at Jersey City. He was taken to St. Francis Hospital, in that city, where the right hand was amputated at the wrist. Mrs. Hugh Malloy, his sister, visited him this week, and he is now recovering rapidly.

—The business establishment of F. P. Malloy, on Front Street, managed by M. J. Moran, has been sold to T. J. Malloy. Mr. Moran will still remain in charge, while the retiring proprietor will give his whole attention to the business of the new firm of Malloy & McGretter, who have opened a dry goods and grocery store in McGroarty's building, Five Points.
—A rumor was let loose at Hazleton yesterday that a cyclone struck Freeland and killed six men. It is true that a nice little shower paid the town a visit between 1 and 2 o'clock, but nothing worse than a pair of big-tongued tinkers struck the place this week. Freeland can't afford to have six men killed outright. They are all needed at the Sunday base ball games.

It will also be necessary to reappoint a teacher for the Highland grammar school, Mr. Brown having been selected principal at Freeland.

Of Interest to Councilmen and Others.

The Pottsville Chronicle says many people here had the idea that they could let their pavements and gutters take care of themselves and need pay no attention to the notices from the borough authorities to pave, curb and gutter. They also had an idea that if Council did the work the money could not be collected from them. Those ideas are all exploded now. Last week the case of the borough of Pottsville against Francis B. Bannan to recover the cost of curbing and guttering his property was on trial before Judge Bechtel. The jury took the case and rendered a verdict in favor of the borough. Bannan must reimburse the town for the money spent to fix up his property. This was a test case. Others are to follow. The borough solicitor says there is $4,000 worth of this kind of debts to be collected and he means to get every cent of it.

Where the Indians Came From.

W. D. Kline, of Drifton, was in town on Monday. Mr. Kline has recently published a monograph to prove that the American Indians are descended from Latin races, basing his belief upon the similarity of many Indian words with Latin roots. It has attracted much attention.—Sentinel.

To Correspondents.

The TRIBUNE has always been liberal in granting space to correspondents who wish to express their views upon any subject, and will at all times try to make room for legitimate communications, but during the past two weeks three articles have been refused. Two were of a class that cast unjust reflections upon a business man of town and the other was a "hoax" for a certain candidate who is striving for political honors. These communications were from men who, if writing upon proper subjects, would be freely granted the use of our columns, but the TRIBUNE cannot allow itself to be made a medium through which personal animosities may be vented or advertising sheet for politicians. The actions of public officers or others may be criticized when proof can be shown for its necessity, but under no circumstances can we allow correspondents to interfere with private individuals. Political notices must be paid for at the rate charged for business locals.

The Mine Gives Up Its Dead.

The Mauch Chunk Times of Monday says: The remains of Hugh Sharpe, who has been entombed in No. 4 colliery of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company, at Summit Hill, since the fire on Friday, May 8, were found Sunday morning at 2 o'clock and during the night was brought to the surface. They were consigned to the grave Monday afternoon. Sharpe was unmarried and resided with his mother at No. 5, where the funeral took place. The fire broke out in this mine on Friday, May 8. One hundred and fifty men were in the mine at the time and all escaped excepting Sharpe.
A persistent search was conducted for him until the mine was so filled with smoke, sulphur, gas and heat that it became dangerous. The search was discontinued and the fire smothered by filling the mine with water, coal dirt and other refuse. The work of removing the vast quantity of water and debris required to extinguish the fire is now nearly finished and Sunday morning the remains of the unfortunate miner were found at the bottom of the mine near the foot of the steam pipe way. He was not much disfigured, death having come from suffocation.

PREPARE TO WEEP.

His Highness Will Leave the Borough and Become a Footman.
Before many months pass by the annexation question will be brought once more to the attention of Freeland people. This time, however, it will not be the addition Five Points, but the Birkbeck suburb, which promises to soon develop into a large and healthy portion of the town. The question as stated above, will be to annex this new territory, the citizens of the borough must prepare to face a dreadful alternative.

Can the people of Freeland afford to see our gallant High Constable, Robert M. Rinker, captured by Foster township? Not likely! Then the only known way to avert such a calamity is by extending the northern line of the borough far enough to include the handsome residence Robert is preparing to erect. If this is completed he will move into it, and the H. C. himself is authority for this statement and tells the TRIBUNE that unless the Birkbeck estate is taken under the borough wires such a calamity will be inevitable to the land he loves so dearly and become a local subject of his bosom friend, Emperor Sault, the monarch of Foster.

But the annexation is not as yet generally known, and but the announcement has reached the ears of a few and created much excitement among them. To think that Rinker, the most ornamental fixture of the municipal government, would desert his post as a matter of fact, is almost incredible. He must not be allowed to do it. The town cannot live without him. Everything would be topsy-turvy in a week if he goes. Annex the whole town—extend the line to the North Pole if necessary—but keep Robert within its limits.

Who could so faithfully perform the trying and often thankless duties of High Constable? What would become of the carcasses of defunct animals and who would dig such beautiful elegies over the departed spirits of Freeland canines? How could the dogs and swine without the presence of Rinker to frighten them off? The people have but little idea how necessary to their very existence is his official.

Not only must they sustain this irreplaceable loss unless annexation takes place, but what would a spring election amount to in the Rinker ticket? He is a sure winner every time, and when political revolutions occur the Democrats can always rest assured that they have carried the office of High Constable against all comers. They must not let this prize go over to the opposition, and Rinker is the only man who can hold it.

Think of how this unsuspecting innocent will fare among Foster statesmen when he is cast into that uncertain arena, as he is, untaught in the arts and intrigues of wire-pullers, what a shock his morality will receive when he gets a glimpse of his newly-formed friends? He may possibly be led from the path of political virtue if he ever becomes a delegate to the Highland convention, for there he will meet men who can give Matt Quay tips on "how to do it." But let us hope that he will never be subjected to these temptations. Annex the Birkbeck addition, keep Rinker in the borough and all will end serenely.

Coxe Bros' Case.

The case of the Interstate Commerce Commission vs. the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, in which the plaintiff seeks to compel a compliance with its mandate issued in the case in which Coxe Bros. & Co. were plaintiffs against the same defendant, has been postponed by mutual consent until fall. Apparently the shippers will continue to pay while the shippers will continue to pay the scheduled tolls to the Lehigh Valley under protest. The trade several months ago gave up speculating upon the effect that the outcome of this case would have on the market, and the postponement now is received with more or less indifference.

Death of an Estimable Young Man.

At 7 o'clock yesterday morning John Mellon, Jr., died at the residence of his parents, corner of Ridge and Carbon Streets. He had been ill about a week, and while his condition was regarded as serious, it was not thought that the end was so near. The deceased was almost 22 years of age, to-day being his birthday, and was considered a most exemplary young man, ranking high in the estimation of his friends and acquaintances. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. Interment at St. Ann's Cemetery.

Does Advertising Pay?

This is a very important question to business men and one that only business men can answer. We have the assurance from thousands of them who advertise, that it does pay if judiciously pursued and many of them have given their testimony in its favor. The reader will take up the city papers from day to day for years, he will find the columns filled with the announcements of leading business houses. They do not come before the public at long intervals, but regularly, daily, changing their advertisements with its variation in their stocks, qualities and prices of goods, thus have to sell, but arousing the desire of buyers to examine what is offered, thus making customers and popularizing these classes of business. This class of men will tell you in this day of competition that it would be impossible to do a business or secure anything like an average trade, if they did not invite custom by giving in detail a clear statement of what they have got to sell.
On the other hand, thousands of men who have started in business with fair capital, plenty of push and a knowledge of trade, have gone to the wall simply because they "hid their light under a bushel," in failing to compete with their neighbors in having the buying public know where they were, what they were selling and what inducement they had to offer. A man may have the best stock of goods in the market, but he fails to invite custom, or make known the inducements he can offer, he is sure to drop behind in the race, while his sharper neighbor is reaping a rich harvest.—Ed.

More Light On a Strange Case.

A strange story comes to us, which, if true, puts the McMillan case in a new light, says the Pittsford correspondent of the Scranton Truth. It will be remembered that McMillan was recently convicted for wife murder on merely circumstantial evidence, and that no one testified to having been a witness to the crime. It has been intimated that the killing was done by a different party altogether, and that party was a woman. We have also been informed by reliable authority that Dr. Hays, who was called in to see Mrs. McMillan, has expressed doubts as to McMillan's guilt, and a belief in the theory that the crime was committed by the woman alluded to in the presence of another woman, who was more or less an accomplice.
There are other people in Sturmerville who have grave suspicions as to the guilt of the woman referred to. For obvious reasons we do not at present give the names of the women. The story told is as follows: It is stated that a certain pair of women well known in Sturmerville had been in the habit of indulging in periodical sprints with the McMillans. One of the women frequently urged him to leave his family and come with her, but he had some excuse. He failed to induce McMillan to run away with her, this woman in a drunken mood hit upon the devilish device of so disgracing Mrs. McMillan that the husband of the latter would desert her, but this had some success. The night on which the murder was committed McMillan and his wife and the two women in question were all drinking and drunk. McMillan became suddenly frank and went down a lounge, after which the woman began to quarrel. The woman who wanted to elope with McMillan struck Mrs. McMillan several times over the head with a pair of tongs and after the victim fell upon the floor she went to the effects in the trunk and the blows she had received, the murderer reddened the poker and thrust it into Mrs. McMillan's body in the manner so often described. The wounds thus inflicted severed some large arteries, and the second woman, who had some knowledge of such matters, attempted to cauterize the wounds and stop the bleeding by holding red hot coals to the wounds.
Fearing that Mrs. McMillan was liable to die, both women fled to their homes and she was drunk to die, while her stupidly drunken husband had nothing to do with it and was entirely unaware of the crime that had taken place. In proof of the above story it is stated that when Dr. Hays was brought to the McMillan house not a speck of blood was found on the clothing of the latter. McMillan was lying drunk on the lounge and had the appearance of a drunken man.

The Injunction Granted.

Judge Rice on Friday decided an important suit against the Kineston Coal Company. The mine law of 1885 says no breaker or other inflammable structure shall be erected within 200 feet of the shaft's mouth at any coal mine. All breakers then standing were of course closed down. On the 12th inst. the breakers of the Kingston Coal Company at Edwardsville were destroyed by fire. Both were within 200 feet of the shaft's mouth, in fact were almost directly over the shaft. The company has now started to rebuild upon the same location.
As soon as Mine Inspector Williams discovered this, he filed his application for an injunction, stopping them. The company made a desperate battle, and in which it was impossible to build the breaker elsewhere, with the law was unconstitutional, and that there was absolutely no danger, the mine having several other outlets. The corporation, however, failed to convince Judge Rice that the law was unconstitutional, and he decided that it must be obeyed. He granted the injunction restraining them from erecting a wooden breaker, but intimated that an iron one would be allowed.

Powderly Declines.

General Master Workman Powderly has announced his declination of his appointment by Governor Pattison as a member of the World's Fair Commission. As the executive officer of a great labor organization he feels that he must be free to criticize the official act of public officers, and it would therefore be inconsistent with his ideas to accept any appointment.

To Our Subscribers.

The special announcement which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address to B. J. Kendall Co. (and enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. This trust will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and in Canada, make it stand in authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise."

Coal Trade Prospects.

The coal trade is quiet and there has been no new feature worthy of special mention developed within the past week. The Eastern business continues dull, but the local line and city trade shows a slight increase in the demand for some sizes. Prices are still being cut, though the tendency is toward higher figures, and some of the mining and carrying corporations claim to be getting full June circular prices, and in some instances, where there is no competition, the July circular prices are being demanded. The shipment of anthracite westward is active, the vessels bringing grain eastward offering advantageous terms for return charters, but most of the coal now being forwarded is for future distribution and consumption.
The total amount of anthracite coal sent to market for the week ending July 4, as reported by the several carrying companies, was 752,759 tons, compared with 594,726 tons in the corresponding week last year, an increase of 158,033 tons. The total amount of anthracite mined thus far in the year 1891 was 18,371,966 tons, compared with 15,816,036 tons for the same period last year, an increase of 2,555,930 tons.—Ledger.

BASE BALL.

Is the home team in it? Well, yes. Read its schedule for the next ten days:
Freeland at Jeannette, July 17.
Freeland at Wilkes-Barre, July 18.
Reading at Freeland, July 19.
Jeannette at Freeland, July 20.
Brooklyn at Freeland, July 26.

It was a peculiar game the audience at the park witnessed last Sunday. They might go there again for years without seeing another like it. It was half a dozen varieties of games crowded into one, and the spectators were made weary, interested, discouraged and enthusiastic—all in a short while. The players did sharp fielding, made inexcusable blunders, put up a stiff game, went to pieces, batted like Bostonians and struck out—did everything contrary. Wilkes-Barre started out at a winning gam, and had in the box a young twirler named Devlin, whose delivery was as mysterious as his disposition was petulant. He had a good drop ball, which fooled Freeland for awhile in the early part of the game. But he was easily rattled and had less control of his temper than he was forced of the ball. Wilkes-Barre was held to the most tiresome dilatory tactics to delay the game every time Devlin lost his head, and the patience of the onlookers was often taxed beyond the ordinary limit. The visitors are good batters and Welch had his hands full in trying to peg them, and his support was well-staged by a great deal when superlative ball playing was required. The most reliable men ran about like a lot of amateurs when good work was expected, and at a moment afterward would give exhibitions of fine professional fielding. It was a genuine razzle-dazzle until the sixth inning, with Wilkes-Barre steadily advancing to the goal of victory. Freeland could not get more than two men over the plate up to this time. They even had the bases filled and none out, but the sluggers at the bat couldn't hit safely just then if their lives depended on it.

Then the seventh opened. The score was 6 to 2, and it looked gloomy for the home team. It was with a sickly smile Freeland's batters stepped to the plate, but Brady's music-box was set going and he had to succumb to its influence. Two safe hits, two stolen bases, two errors and two runs were scored. It was getting interesting, and Freeland took courage when Brady went to the bat. He popped up a fly to right field which Swartman captured, dropped and picked up as it touched the ground. Everyone thought he was safe, but Umpire Bonner took a different view and called him out. All hands took part in the discussion that followed, and a row in the game was averted by Mr. Bonner resigning as umpire. He was succeeded by John J. McNeil, but the decision stood and Freeland had to take the field. The visitors were quickly retired without scoring, and as the eighth inning was about to begin, the fireworks which touched off the fireworks with a single. Then the fun began. Wilkes-Barre showed how much they don't know about base ball, and in a shorter space of time than it takes to tell it the score was tied. Brilliant mistakes, beautiful fouls, errors, wild throws and costly errors characterized the work of the county set folks. In the meantime Freeland men were running bases and scoring as they pleased. Ten players had completed the circuit when the ninth was under way. In the ninth Wilkes-Barre put in a battery Swartman and Zeller, Devlin going to right and Brown to first. The change, however, was made "too late." Freeland scored two more and gave the visitors one, finishing the game 16 to 2.
