FREELAND, PA., AUGUST 13, 1891.

By the death of William T. Crossdale on Sunday, after a short illness, the single taxers of the United States lost one of their ablest leaders. His writings upon the questions of taxation and finance during the past few years attracted considerable attention. At the time of his death he was editor of the New York (Henry George's) Standard, and Chairman of the National Committee of the Single Tax League.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND occasionally appears at public gatherings and entertains his hearers with short addresses upon different subjects. Of course there is nothing remarkable about that. Thousands of other men do the same thing, yet not one of them can command the widespread attention accorded to Grover. Every word he utters is reported from Maine to California, and if by chance he touches upon politics the whole army of Republican editors is thrown into confusion. They betray their nervous fear of him in every line they write, and the nomination of this fearless statesman will put the Republican party on the defensive in the campaign of 1892.

THE Republican party heaved a deep sigh of relief when the resignation of Quay was announced. The party is to be congratulated upon being released from the power of this man, who has done more to contaminate politics than all the politicians since the institution of the republic. But the Republican party has another and greater task before it. To command and retain the respect of voters it must cleanse itself of Quay methods, with which it is at present polluted. It was impossible for it to remain under the leadership of an acknowledged thief and perjurer without partaking of his nature, and now, since the G. O. P. is rid of Quay, it must abolish every form of Quaysism.

Provision has been made for the landing of sixteen Russian Hebrews who had arrived at Boston in a destitute condition and were detained there as liable to become a public charge. They had, in fact, been deprived of their homes in Russia, and, in consideration of this fact, they are to be admitted to this country, provided security is entered in the sum of $2500 for each family or $1000 for an individual, conditioned upon their not becoming a public charge. It is understood that the Jewish societies will furnish the bonds and look after the unfortunate immigrants until they shall be able to care for themselves. Nothing is said about the term during which the bond is to run, but presumably after the immigrant has become a citizen of this country by naturalization his security will be released.

The convention of Republican State Clubs, to be held at Scranton in a few weeks, promises to furnish more fun for the Democrats. Congressman Senator Jack Robinson wants to be President of this League, and through the executive committee has sent out an order which debar all clubs organized this year from taking part in the convention. This move of the wily Delaware County politician resulted in a hopeless division of the clubs, and the Philadelphia Press advises the new organizations to send their representatives to Scranton, where, if they are refused admittance, they can hold a bigger convention than the other faction. In the meantime the Democrats are pulling together with a unanimity never before equalled, and are gaining strength every day through Republican dissensions.

What Experience Proves.
It has required many years of experience to convince advertisers that the newspaper is the only medium through which an adequate and certain return for their money is assured. The acquisition of this knowledge has cost the advertisers of the country hundreds of thousands of dollars. The lessons of experience were expensive, but as it was the only school in which they could be learned, the cost is not to be deplored. Shrewd advertisers now realize that through the newspapers alone can they reach the people.
There is little doubt that the recent example of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in resolving to abandon all forms of advertising except through newspapers of known value will be followed by other advertisers. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company experimented for several years to ascertain the best medium for reaching the public. The newspaper advertisement was found to reach more people for a less expenditure of money than any other medium, and hence it will hereafter be exclusively used.
The results of the experiments of the great railway company are worthy the attention of all advertisers. The fact that after a full and fair test of posters, hangers, calendars, cards and sign boards as advertising mediums, the company discovered that they produced smaller returns and were more expensive than newspaper advertising, should be appreciated by the most obtuse user of printer's ink. The Pennsylvania knows a real good thing.

BASE BALL.

Freeland at Lehighton, August 15. Scranton at Freeland, August 16.

The Freeland Club played ball at Wilkes-Barre on Saturday in a style that would have set the local enthusiasts wild if the game had taken place on the home grounds. They never went on a field with more confidence and led off at a winning gait that was kept up until the contest ended. They played with a dash and vigor seldom before equalled, and their team work at the bat and in the field was remarkable. Wilkes-Barreans certainly were given by Freeland the prettiest exhibition of ball playing they have had for many a day. Devlin was pitted against them and it was worth the trip to the county seat to see the smile which crept across the countenance of Hamilton's men when they saw him in the box. "Chicken" sent the second ball which came over the plate out between short and second for a safe hit, went to second on Brady's sacrifice and scored on Welch's single. O'Hara's optics went in good condition and his three-bagger brought Welch home. Bachman's single took O'Hara in and he followed on McGarvey's safe hit. Heffron was thrown out at first and McGeady fled, retiring the side. Freeland was anxious to get to the bat again and after allowing Wilkes-Barre one hit came in to pile up a few more runs.

Anderson took first on four balls and McGeehan struck out. Anderson went to third on Brady's two-base hit and scored on a passed ball. Welch's single brought Brady in and the former scored on O'Hara's safe hit and Feisler's error of Bachman's hit. O'Hara came home on a passed ball and Bachman did the same on McGarvey's single. Heffron sacrificed, giving another base to McGarvey, who scored on a wild throw to third. McGeady and Anderson took their bases on balls, the former scoring on McGeehan's hit. Another passed ball let in two more runs. Brady and Welch took third on passed balls and trotted home on O'Hara's two-bagger, but the hitter was caught on the line between second and third and Freeland took the field again. That is how they won the game and rubbed the defeat in so deep that Wilkes-Barre will probably never efface it. Goekel, the wonder from the Buffalo College, took Devlin's place after the slaughter. He had some contrary balls and his south-paw contortions were very menacing, but the boys followed Bachman's style, who led off with a grass-cutter to right field, and they touched him up for six hits in as many innings.

The remainder of the game was marked by the brilliant fielding of the visitors, who played an errorless game on the diamond, their only misplay being Brady's wild throw to third. Anderson was very effective when men were on bases and pitched good ball. Feisler's work at short, Brady's base stealing and coaching, and the all-around fine playing of Freeland changed what might have been a dull game into an interesting and exciting struggle. The fact that this game was to decide the championship made the victory so much sweeter.

Following is the score:

The Press wants the portraits and biographies of Freeland's leading players, but the only way their photos can be obtained is to send a man with a kodak here and catch them unawares. They are entirely too modest to comply with the request of the Press.

Scranton is the attraction for next Sunday. This club has been very anxious to have another game with Freeland, having been defeated here once this season by a very close score. The manager writes that he will come with a winning team.

Freeland has five lost and seven won. South Easton will play two games at Jeunesville on Saturday.

The Soapies play against Milnesville on Saturday at the Harleigh grounds.

The Franklinville Club, of Philadelphia, failed to show up on Sunday.

If money can bring them the Athletics, of Philadelphia, will be seen here when the Association season is ended.

The Tigers play at Mauch Chunk with the club of that place on Saturday.

Danville is making a tour of the State. They play at Wilkes-Barre to-morrow and Saturday, and will be here in a few weeks.

There is not a more reliable hitter in the club. Jennings attended school last year on money borrowed from his brother, and since he joined the Louisville Club he has been sufficiently frugal to enable him to return it. He not only tries to attain the highest round in the ladder, of base ball fame, but when not on the diamond he devotes himself to improving his mind.

Scranton last Thursday got three singles off Goekel, of Wilkes-Barre, who was hit with ease by Freeland, and on Saturday the best amateur club in Philadelphia, the Highlands, could not touch Swoyer, of Reading, who was knocked clean out of the box by Freeland. The home club has little mercy for any pitcher's reputation when they wear their batting clothes.

James Russell Lowell, ex-Minister to Spain and England, and Geo. Jones, editor of the New York Times, died yesterday.
